French Win Air Battle; Soviet, Japan Sign Truce

Polish 'Lost Army' Escapes to Warsaw

Poilus See Planes Beat Off Strafers; Paris Reports 4 Towns Captured

By H. Taylor Henry,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris, Sept. 15.—French warplanes were reported tonight to have defeated an undisclosed number of German planes which were bombing and strafing French troops in an effort to halt their general advance on the Western Front.

Dispatches from the front indicated German forces were retreating slowly from advance positions all along the front's northern flank.

The French and German planes clashed so low over the lines, it was said, that advancing troops almost could distinguish the faces of the pilots.

The Germans were reported to be bringing to bear the full force of their air force and artillery.

At least three full Nazi divisions were reported fighting to hold the strongest advance defenses of the German Siegfried Line along a 12-mile front before the great industrial city of Saarbruecken and to the east of that city, whose defenses hold the key to the center of the active front.

Rear Guard Fights Stubbornly

The only official indication yet given on French strength was a communique which announced a week ago that one division had taken part in the conquest of the Warndt Forest area alone. The area lies west of Saarbruecken.

The Germans were said to be fighting a dogged rear-guard action to cover their main forces falling back toward the Siegfried Line.

Local counter-attacks held up the French for hours until reinforcements arrived. The attacks were stopped and the advance of the French was resumed.

From the brief description of the air fighting in the official communique tonight, it was apparent that German planes strafed the French advance lines and forced them to dig for cover.

French pursuit planes roared out from airdromes behind France's Maginot Line and fought off the German ships.

The French were said to be advancing through a screen of shells laid down by German artillery on a 40-mile sector extending from the Moselle River, on the extreme north, where the front touches Luxembourg, to a point 2 miles beyond Saarbrucken.

Dispatches from Brussels said the Moselle Valley fighting proceeded all day with intense bombardments. Terrific gunfire was heard at the Luxembourg frontier, where inhabitants were annoyed by fumes from exploding shells.

The present phase of the French attack, it was said, began to make itself felt on the Germans when the French penetrated advance positions in front of the Siegfried Line to the east of Saarbruecken, threatening the keystone of the German northern flank.

Withdraw Methodically

A communique from the general staff indicated the French line was moving steadily toward Saarbruecken, capital of the industrially rich Saar valley, "despite strong enemy reactions, notably by his artillery."

The Nazis started a methodical withdrawal from the Saarbruecken area under cover of a barrage from their heavy mortars and then began pulling troops back from the line to the northwest to strengthen the rest of the line, it was reported here.

The French advance was reported to have captured at least four German villages, two near the Moselle and two east of Saarbruecken.

It was from Perl, assumed to be one of these villages, a mile and a half within Germany, that fresh Nazi troops launched a counter-offensive up the Moselle valley last Sunday, forcing the French to give up some 500 yards of previously-won territory.

The French reported today that they not only halted the German attack but hurled the Nazis back and captured the positions from which the Germans counter-attack had begun.

A fresh French attack was reported to have started in force along the Moselle late today.

The main body of French troops advanced on the road from Merschwiller southeast to Perl which runs between high ground designated on military maps as hills 354 and 372. The advance guard was said to have

Lift Embargo, Avoid War, Stimson Urges

Arms Ban Encourages Aggressors And Is Contrary to U. S. Tradition, Former Secretary of State Declares

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Sept. 15.—Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of State under President Hoover, declared today, he believed repeal of the mandatory arms embargo clauses of the neutrality act "constitutes perhaps the last remaining hope of our avoiding being dragged" into the European war.

He made his statement in a letter to the New York Times and The Washington Post commenting on the Thursday night address in which Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, opposed the embargo repeal.

Stimson's letter, in full, follows:

"In my work in the State Department I have been the beneficiary of Senator Borah's assistance and advice on far too many occasions for me to have anything but grateful recollections of his wisdom and patriotism. Where we have differed has not been in our objectives nor I think in fundamental principles, but rather as to the most effective methods and means of reaching the patriotic objectives which we both have in view.

"I think that is the case now. I do not differ from the Senator in his desire that our country should be saved from the agonies of a participation in the war in Europe. In fact, I have reason for the strength of my desire which he has not. For I witnessed the great war as a participant and saw at close hand its sorrows and devastation. Today I have young kinsmen whose call to participation in another such conflict would wring my heart. Therefore, the thought uppermost in my mind in every approach to this subject is what is the best and surest way of saving us from such a dire contingency.

"Senator Borah evidently thinks

Fighting Stops in Far East Today; Non-Aggression Pact Rumored

By Witt Hancock,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Sept. 15.—Soviet Russia and Japan today agreed to an armistice in their "vest-pocket" war on the troubled Manchukuo-Outer Mongolia border in a move which some diplomatic quarters saw as a forerunner to a non-aggression pact.

The agreement to end hostilities on the frontier between Japanese-dominated Manchukuo and Soviet-ized Outer Mongolia was announced through Tass, Soviet official news agency. Japanese - Manchukuoan and Soviet-Mongolian forces had been fighting intermittently on the disputed frontier since May 11.

The announcement said the armistice would begin at 2 p. m. (9 a. m., E. S. T.) tomorrow.

Border Commission Provided

The respective forces, under the agreement, will maintain positions held at 1 p. m. today.

A commission of two Japanese-Manchukuoan and two Soviet-Mongolian representatives will be organized "at the earliest possible date" to establish a frontier line between the two states.

The agreement was reached following negotiations between Japanese Ambassador Shigenori Togo and Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff.

One quarter, unofficial, but usually reliable, expressed belief some sort of nonaggression pact between the two nations already had been signed and might be announced tomorrow.

Effect on U. S. Feared

A patching of the quarrel between the two nations probably would have a tremendous effect upon Japan's campaign in China. The Soviets have been more or less openly supporting the Chinese with materials.

A Russo-Japanese agreement also would deal a blow at the British foothold in Asia and might possibly affect the United States' interests in the Far East, observers here said.

As a result of today's developments, much deeper significance is now attached to a communique issued yesterday by Tass, official Soviet news agency, which said Russia had not taken any Manchukuo territory and had no intention of doing so.

New Triumph for Hitler

Ever since signing of the German-Soviet nonaggression pact on August 24, Germany has been trying to promote a reconciliation between Moscow and Tokyo.

It was learned Ambassador Togo has had four conferences with Molotoff in the last four days, although there were few details of the possibly momentous meetings.

The signing of a nonaggression pact between Russia and Japan would be considered another diplomatic triumph for Adolf Hitler.

There have been intense efforts among Nazi officials to stave off what was feared might be British efforts toward some understanding with Japan.

Fighting Since May 11

Japanese troops garrisoned in Manchukuo have had repeated border clashes with Soviet-Mongolian troops along the winding 1,000-miles frontier. Reports of these skirmishes have been vague except for occasional communiques from Moscow or Tokyo or journeys to the isolated front by neutral correspondents.

Outer Mongolia, under Soviet protection, long has disputed her boundary with Japanese-dominated Manchukuo.

Some of the engagements were reported so extensive that planes, tanks and mechanized forces took part. Bombing raids were engaged in by both sides.

Congress Alarmed

By the Associated Press

Chairman Bloom (Democrat), of New York, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said yesterday of the reported Russo-Japanese "armistice" and forthcoming non-aggression pact, "there is so much war propaganda this might be just a feeler to test world reaction."

Administration quarters were silent on possible effect of such an agreement on world affairs, but the report aroused outspoken interest in Congressional circles.

"If such be true," said Representative Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, "it is evidence of a realignment of the world's dictatorial and

Lindbergh Says War Might Cost Million Men

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh last night appealed to Americans to guard carefully against this country's entrance into the European war, warning that participation might cost "several million men—the best of American youth."

"If we enter fighting for democracy abroad," he declared, "we may end by losing it here."

Speaking over all major Nation-wide networks from a hotel room, with only a few persons present, the flier delivered one of his exceedingly rare public utterances, on "America and European Wars."

Thus he followed in the footsteps of his father, Charles Augustus Lindbergh, sr., who as a member of Congress vigorously opposed United States entrance into the World War.

Silent on Neutrality Act

Col. Lindbergh made no direct reference to the pending struggle over revision of the neutrality law to permit sale of American munitions to all countries.

"Let us make no mistake about the cost of entering this war," he said. ". . . munitions alone will not be enough. We cannot count on victory merely by shipping abroad several thousand airplanes and cannon. We are likely to lose a million men—possibly several million—the best of American youth.

"We must not be misguided by this foreign propaganda to the effect that our frontiers lie in Europe," he said. ". . . what more could we ask than the Atlantic Ocean on the east and the Pacific Ocean on the west? . . . An ocean is a formidable barrier even for modern aircraft."

He cautioned that:

"We must not permit our sentiment, our pity or our personal feelings of sympathy to obscure the issue, to effect our children's lives.

"We must be as impersonal as a

Only Interests Limit U.S. Seas, Says Roosevelt

Hopes Congress Will Limit Its Action to Neutrality Issues

By William V. Neusly.

The strife-laden issue of neutrality is the only one President Roosevelt intends to present to the extra session of Congress when it convenes next Thursday, he plainly indicated yesterday.

His message on the "extraordinary occasion" that prompted him to summon the legislators here almost four months before their regular meeting date, may ask only for abandonment of the mandatory embargo on munitions to belligerent powers, may seek a wider revision of the neutrality law, or may call for its complete repeal to permit principles of international law to guide the Administration in its foreign relations. He declined to say at his press conference yesterday whether he would make the latter request, explaining that to answer it would involve disclosing the contents of his communication to the Congress.

Limited Only by Interests

He does not intend to ask for new anti-profiteering legislation or for any deficiency appropriation or war-risk insurance legislation, he told reporters.

Mr. Roosevelt, however, did present a new definition of the extent of the Nation's territorial waters when he said the limit was as far out as our interests needed to go. Laughing, he added that no one else had ever defined territorial waters in that manner.

To a question whether the territorial waters might then reach "to the Rhine" he replied with a chuckle that he was speaking only of salt water.

The question had reference to a report that the President, at a conference of Senators last spring, had said this country's frontier was on the Rhine, a statement that the Women Commend The Post For Clarity in War News

Women as well as men appreciate the addition of The New York Times War News to The Washington Post's thorough coverage of the European struggle, according to comment received yesterday.

"The Post," said Mrs. Ernest Humphrey, president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, "certainly gives very fine coverage of what is going on. No paper could give a more complete service nor a clearer analysis of the news than it does now with The New York Times writers added to those it already had. We would not be without The Post."

Mrs. C. D. Lowe, president of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, also praised the new addition to The Post's war coverage.

"The Post has done an excellent job of reporting the war news," she said. "Both my husband and my son have commented on the new service."

Ann Gillis, Columbia Broadcasting System executive, said, "The New York Times war service is a splendid news source and I am glad to be able to read it in my Washington Post."

Men who added their praise to that which has reached The Post since the service was adopted included:

Justice Bolitha J. Laws: "The New York Times has long been recognized as one of the outstanding papers of the world, and I shall follow its war service with interest in The Post."

Former Judge Michael M. Doyle: "I think it is fine. The Post already

Latest developments on the Eastern Front

The War Today

WARSAW REPORTED the "lost army," which broke the jaws of the German trap north of Lodz, had cut through the German encirclement and entered Warsaw, bringing with it 1,000 prisoners and stores.

BRITAIN REVEALED destruction of several German submarines, denied Nazi allegations British intended to violate Belgian neutrality and intensified war activity, anticipating Soviets soon may enter Poland and later help Germany divide Rumania.

"ANNIHILATION" OF POLISH force at Radom and continued attack on defenders of Warsaw and Kutno is asserted by Germany.

FRENCH REPORTED having turned back German airplane attack on Western Front and claimed Germans were in retreat.

FOREIGN DIPLOMATS, including American Ambassador Biddle, arrived at Cernauti, Rumania, with reports of a new big German drive in southeast Poland to cut country off from Rumania.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT indicated strongly that he hopes to limit legislation at special session to revision of the neutrality law.

GERMAN CITIES and towns were told they must pay $500,000,000 annually, in addition to amounts assessed individuals, for war costs.

Belgian Steamer Sunk in Channel

London, Sept. 15 (AP).—A Belgian steamer, whose name was not learned immediately, was sunk in the English Channel tonight. Survivors were picked up by a south coast life boat and a British naval vessel. Six men were taken to a hospital. They told hospital authorities their vessel had struck something about 6 p. m. and an explosion followed. A later report said a Greek vessel had picked up 49 survivors.

Lithuanians to Evacuate Children

Kaunas, Lithuania, Sept. 15 (INS).—Lithuanian authorities today ordered 35,000 school children, invalids and aged persons evacuated immediately from Kaunas as a "precautionary measure" because of Polish-German hostilities.

200 Bombs Dropped on Wilno

London (Saturday), Sept. 16 (INS).—One of the most destructive air raids of the European war was executed by 18 German bombing planes against the northeastern Polish city of Wilno, Exchange Telegraph News Agency reported this morning. The planes dropped 200 bombs.

South America Naval Patrol Weighed

Buenos Aires, Sept. 15 (UP).—Foreign Minister Jose Maria Cantilo tonight said that Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay are considering establishment of a joint naval patrol for the South American Atlantic Coast.

British Fear Nazis Will Turn On Rumania After Poland

By William Hillman,
International News Service Staff Writer

London, Sept. 15.—Fear that Adolf Hitler may invade Rumania after dividing most of Poland with Russia was expressed in London circles tonight as the Anglo-French allies increased the tempo of their war upon Germany.

While fastening a vigilant watch on mobilizing Russia, the British government claimed far-flung naval successes, stating that "a number" of German submarines have been sunk and that the British contraband naval patrol had stopped and seized large quantities of material bound for Germany, including 285,000 tons of oil.

Simultaneously the information ministry in an official communique denounced alleged German reports stating Britain intends to violate Belgium's neutrality by landing expeditionary forces at Belgian ports for a flanking invasion of Germany north of the Siegfried Line. The communique branded these reports "crude German propaganda."

Amid announcements and reports concerning allied activity by land, sea and air, the question that dominated all discussion in London and Paris was whetheer and when the Soviet Union would hurl its huge forces across its western frontier into Poland.

That such a step would carry England and France into immediate war with Russia was taken for granted in all informed quarters. It was pointed out that British and French military pledges to Poland covered aggression from any direction.

Capital Wild With Joy as Troops Join City's Defense; German Lines Dangerously Extended, Radio Reveals

Special Cable to The Post

Paris, Sept. 15.—The "lost army" of the Polish Corridor has broken through the jaws of the German trap north of Lodz and entered Warsaw to help defend the city, according to a radio broadcast from Warsaw tonight shortly before the station suddenly was silenced.

The announcer of the Warsaw station was reading from a newspaper an account of the critical military situation in Poland when the transmission suddenly stopped in the middle of a sentence. It was feared a bomb struck the station and the announcer may have been killed. The station's last announcement was:

"The situation may seem unfavorable for Poland, but in reality it is growing dangerous for the Germans who have made motorized advances for the sake of publicity that were too rapid. They are now too far from their bases so that new supplies and help will be very difficult and the danger of isolation arises because——"

The station just before the newspaper account was read had described the feat of the Polish troops in reaching Warsaw from the German-occupied Polish Corridor as the greatest single military exploit of the war thus far.

The broadcast by the Warsaw station said the victorious army of the Corridor entered the barricaded streets of the capital with 1,000 German prisoners, 12 guns and stores of ammunition, after breaking through the German encirclement in the Kutno-Lowicz sector, 80 miles west of Warsaw.

130,000 Troops in 'Lost Army'

Previous Warsaw broadcasts had given the strength of the "lost army" as about ten divisions, or approximately 130,000 or 140,000 troops. After breaking through the German encirclement in an attack on the rear of the Nazi forces moving on Warsaw from the southwest, the "lost army" was said to have made liaison with the Warsaw army and to have "decisively defeated" two German divisions in fierce battle.

A Polish air fleet, in a daring raid far behind the lines, destroyed the principal base from which German planes took off in their repeated attacks on Warsaw, the Polish radio announced according to a Reuter dispatch early today. "The base was completely destroyed, thus weakening the activity of the German air force," a communique said.

Meanwhile, a German flying column roving far in advance of the main Nazi army tonight terrified thousands of Polish war refugees, for whom all escape has been cut off, in a series of lightning raids in the Polish Ukraine.

Bitter Polish resistance on the outskirts of Lwow was reported to have driven back the advancing Germans, despite German air raids there that killed 20,000 civilians, accounting for more casualties than the Polish military suffered.

2,000,000 Face Trap at Lwow

Dispatches indicated that Germans advancing to points east of the city along routes north and south of Lwow soon would isolate it. Military dispatches indicated that perhaps 2,000,000 faced entrapment in the Lwow and Brest-Litovsk areas.

It was reported that one heavily motorized German column was proceeding toward Stryj, large oil refining center south of Lwow in the direction of the Rumanian frontier, and another toward Rawa Ruska, north of Lwow.

Intense artillery fire was said to have greatly weakened the Lwow defenses, with extensive damage throughout the city.

British and French hopes of a "Polish Battle of the Marne" to halt the German motorized encirclement of Warsaw and the Polish security triangle to the south were vanishing.

The Polish general staff admitted, according to advices reaching Paris, that it was unable to halt the crushing drive of the Germans against the Polish flanks east of the Vistula, San and Bug rivers.

These flanks were being turned south of the Bug River near Siedlce to the east of Warsaw and east of the San River, through the Galician oil fields to the south of Przemysl and Lwow.

There was grave danger, according to French military experts, that the main Polish army of 2,000,000 men might be surrounded in a gigantic pocket containing Warsaw, Kutno, Lodz and Lublin.

Fortress Is Encircled

The German operations today seemed to show clearly that the German high command is intent upon encircling this main Polish army before it can retreat eastward into the deep swamps of the Ukraine, which the Nazi motorized columns would have difficulty in penetrating.

The most disastrous operations for the Poles were in the south, where the Germans carried out two distinct encircling operations, one around Premysl fortress in preparation for the storming of Lwow and the other sweeping through Austrian Galacia into the former Russian territory by way of Stanislawow and Horodenka near the Rumanian border.

The German Fifth Army in the south thereby carried out a swift encirclement of the Polish "security triangle" instead of attempting to storm it frontally.

By capturing the Galician oil fields, the Germans deprived the Poles of fuel for their factories within the triangle.

In the Vistula Valley just south of Warsaw the most immediate menace to the Poles is from the northeast, where the East Prussian army corps.

War Advisers Back Plan for Mobilization

'Educational Orders' Program Approved To Train Industry

A special advisory committee of leading industrialists yesterday gave unanimous indorsement to the War Department's plans for speedy conversion of American industry from a peace to a war basis in time of emergency.

The group, headed by Benedict Crowell, wartime Assistant Secretary of War, reviewed the Army's "educational orders" program, key point of the Nation's industrial mobilization plan. They gave approval to both the procedure and the list of projects proposed, with the exception of Air Corps items, which will be the subject of a later report.

Congress has appropriated $14,500,000 to permit the department to let small contracts for arms and other noncommercial war materials, thus giving training to the selected firms and laying in a supply of jigs, dies and machinery. Only articles that would now take industry six months or more to produce in event of war are included in the training program, it was revealed.

New England Site Selection

At the same time, the War Department announced the selection of site for a major air base in New England, and said that construction will be started immediately. A 4,300-acre tract 3 miles east of Holyoke and 3½ miles northeast of Chicopee Falls, Mass., was chosen, it was said.

The base is one of a chain authorized last session as a part of the air expansion program. Preliminary work has already started on other bases in Puerto Rico, Panama, Hawaii, Tampta, Fla., and at air depots at Mobile, Ala., and Ogden, Utah. A force of planes will be stationed permanently at the northeast base to safeguard approaches from the shortest route to Europe, under defense plans. It could be quickly reinforced from bases in New York and Michigan, in an emergency.

British Fear Nazi Drive on Rumania

though they originally contemplated only German aggression.

The Soviet invasion of Poland, if it materialized, would be aimed primarily during the first stage at Russian seizure of the Polish Ukraine as a result of Moscow's reputed bargain with Hitler, it was believed in London.

This, it was pointed out, would serve as insurance against any attempt by Hitler to create a nominally autonomous Polish Ukrainian state which the Germen Fuehrer could use for whipping up nationalist sentiment as a stepping stone to attack Russia's rich Ukraine.

Drive on Rumania Feared

Authoritative London circles further believe Hitler is planning to continue his drive through eastern Europe by marching against Rumania—and Rumania's oil fields—after participating with Russia in the partition of Poland.

Russia's acquiescence in a German invasion of Rumania could, it was believed, be obtained by Hitler's agreement to hand over Bessarabia to the Soviets. Rumania's eastern Bessarabian province belonged to Czarist Russia before the World War and Soviet Russia never has canceled its claim on that territory.

Neutral quarters in London voiced the fear Hitler may strike from southern Poland across the Rumanian frontier on the pretext of Rumania's refusal to deliver extra supplies to Germany without reciving foreign exchange in payment.

A Soviet invasion of eastern Poland or eastern Rumania could be based on the rationalization of "border violations."

Rumania Holds Guarantee

It appeared obvious, however, that the British and French hoped to avert a German invasion of Rumania, which possesses Anglo-French military guarantees, by diverting Hitler's forces to the west as swiftly as possible.

The communique, claiming effective results in the operations of the British blockade, reflected an important part of Allied war strategy. It said.

"During the week ended September 9, the British contraband control intercepted and detained a large quantity of goods which, evidence indicates, consists of contraband consigned to Germany.

"This included 285,000 tons of petroleum, 26,350 tons of iron ore, 7,300 tons of wood pulp, 6,000 tons of pebble phosphate and a number of mixed cargoes."

The communique said further that 5,900 tons of phosphate was taken off the American Freighter Warrior. Referring to this, the announcement said:

Belgian Rumors Denied

"The prize court (to rule on contraband questions) is not yet sitting. But when it does, this case will come before it. The ultimate fate of this cargo or its money value, together with the questions of costs and expenses, will depend on the order of the court."

Earlier in the day, the British admiralty issued a communique which for the first time disclosed the scope and intensity of the British navy's drive to sweep German war and merchant ships off the seas. It read:

"His Majesty's destroyers and patrol vessels and aircraft are carrying out constant patrols over wide areas in search of enemy U-boats.

"Many attacks have been made and a number of U-boats have been destroyed, the survivors have been rescued and captured, when possible."

Regarding the German rumors concerning Belgium, the information ministry declared:

"Reports from German sources are being spread in Belgium to the effect that there is an imminent danger of a British landing on the Belgian coast.

"Slow" Attack Defended

"His Majesty's government have recently reaffirmed their obligations to Belgium and their intentions of respecting Belgian neutrality. The German allegations that His Majesty's government intend to violate their solemn engagements are obviously designed to sow distrust of Britain in Belgium.

"But in view of the past history of German and British relations with Belgium, there is fortunately no reason to believe such crude German propaganda will be successful."

The reference to "past history" was obviously a reminder that Germany invaded Belgium in 1914 in order to attack France.

It was officially stated that the moving of British expeditionary troops to France which are fighting on the Western Front was a more complicated process than similar operations in the World War. To those who criticized the "slowness" of the Anglo-French attacks on Germany, the official British reply was:

"The difference between the German and British moves is that we are basing our calculations on the assumption that the war will last three years, whereas the German preparations have been based on the hope of a lightning war."

Deal, Kent, England, Sept. 15. (AP). The British navy, strictly enforcing Britain's wartime rule of detaining virtually every merchant ship to search for contraband cargo, tonight held 70 vessels under armed guard off the southeast coast.

From the Deal pier just before sundown there could be counted 68 merchant ships at anchor under the watchful eye of the fleet. Three others weighing anchor steamed slowly to sea as two new arrivals joined the enforced parade.

Heading the line stretching in a wide arc from Broadstairs to Dover was a big passenger liner. From the mainmast above her steel gray hull and massive white decks bellied the Dutch tricolor.

Two low lying oil tankers lay in a long line of freighters. Virtually every maritime nation in the world was represented.

Stimson Urges Repeal of Arms Ban

that the repeal of the automatic arms embargo provision of the so-called Nye legislation would inevitably drag us into armed participation in the present war. I think that the repeal of those provisions constitutes perhaps the last remaining hope of our avoiding being so dragged in.

"I frankly admit that the danger of our ultimate involvement is great—greater now than it need to have been had that legislation not been originally passed and other similar steps taken and words uttered by us which gave encouragement to those nations whose actions at present have broken the peace of the world. Repeal is a belated step, but it is a step in the direction of possibly saving us from eventual participation rather than of bringing that participation nearer.

Return to Tradition

"Nor is the repeal which I favor a departure from those traditional policies of our country in regard to involvement in European affairs in which Senator Borah so deeply believes and to which he so eloquently refers in this argument. On the contrary, a repeal of this legislation would be a return to those traditional policies of our Government and our forefathers since the very foundation of the United States.

"There was no faith of our fathers so firm or so clear as their faith that the United States would be a peace-loving nation and that its future would be devoted to the orderly development of its inheritance in this continent and not to the seeking of military adventures abroad. But this very faith on their part made those clear-minded statesmen alive to the fact that a peace-loving nation like ours might be placed at a grave disadvantage in this warlike world if the markets of that world, in which it might purchase its arms for self-defense, should be closed to it in a national emergency.

"For this reason it has traditionally been the policy of this country to preserve such freedom in the purchase of arms not only for itself but for other nations similarly situated. For our forefathers were not so narrow-minded as to be blind to the fact that there are other nations in the world, peace-loving like ourselves, who might be caught in a similar predicament and whose destruction if so caught would adversely effect the cause of peace throughout the world.

"Their conception of neutrality did not ignore the possible alignment in this world of nations disposed to peace like ourselves on the one side and nations who for one reason or another might seek to break the peace by acts of aggression upon their neighbors.

"This policy was comprehensively and clearly stated by our Secretary of State, Mr. Lansing, during the great war.

"Secretary Lansing declared that the United States had, from the foundation of the republic to the time of his note (a note of instructions to the American Ambassador to Austria Hungary, August 12, 1915), advocated and practiced unrestricted trade in arms and military supplies, because it had never been the policy of the Nation to maintain in time of peace a large military establishment of stores of arms and ammunition sufficient to repel invasion by a well-equipped and powerful enemy, and that in consequence the United States would in the event of attack by a foreign power be at the outset of the war seriously, if not fatally, embarrassed by the lack of arms and ammunition and of the means to produce them in sufficient quantities to supply the requirements of national defense.

The Right of Others

"'The United States has always,' he said, 'depended upon the right and power to purchase arms and ammunition from neutral nations in case of foreign attack. This right, which it claims for itself, it cannot deny to others.'

"He contended that a nation whose policy and principle it was to rely upon international obligations and international justice to preserve its political and territorial integrity, might become the prey of an aggressive nation whose policy and practice it was to increase its military strength during times of peace with the design of conquest, unless the nation atacked could, after war had been declared, go into the markets of the world and purchase the means to defend itself against the aggressor.

"He declared that the general adoption by the nations of the world of the theory that neutral powers ought to prohibit the sale of arms and ammunition to belligerents would compel every nation to have in readiness at all times sufficient munitions of war to meet any emergency which might arise, and to erect and maintain establishments for the manufacture of arms and ammunition sufficient to supply the needs of its military and naval forces throughout the progress of the war. The application of this theory would result, it was said, in every nation becoming an armed camp, ready to resist aggression and tempted to employ force in asserting its rights rather than to appeal to reason and justice for the settlement of international disputes.

Ban Would Favor Aggressor

"Declaring that the adoption of such a principle would give an inevitable advantage to the belligerent which had encouraged the manufacture of munitions in time of peace and laid in vast stores thereof in anticipation of war, the Secretary said that the Government of the United States was convinced that the adoption of the theory would force militarism on the world and work against universal peace. C. C. Hyde, International Law, Chiefly as Interpreted and Applied by the United States; volume 2, section 867.

"How vividly has the wisdom of our ancestors thus expounded by Secretary Lansing been made evident by the events of today. A group of nations has arisen in the world by whom the practice of military aggression upon their neighbors has become a well-developed art. The old foundation stone of international law that every state in the family of nations should recognize and respect the independent sovereignty of every other state has been thrown by them into the discard, and our Government, though with the best intentions, has played into the hands of that group and has made more difficult the defense against their skillful aggression by the nations whom they have attacked through a departure on our part from international law and our own traditions in respect to the purchase of arms.

"It seems to me too clear for discussion not only that a repeal of this legislation will not make our entrance into the war more likely, but that the hope of defense, which it revives for the peace-loving nations is perhaps our last hope for escaping such involvement."

Bayard Wyman Leaves Estate of $59,992

An estate estimated at $59,992.13 was left by Bayard Wyman, Alexandria (Va.) attorney, who died at his home several days ago. The will was probated before Elliott F. Hoffman, clerk of Corporation Court, Thursday.

Mr. Wyman left his entire estate to his wife, Mrs. Julia Bigelow Wyman, who was named executrix.

'Keep Out of War' Pleas Deluge Senators, but Differ on Method

Sentiment Equally Divided on Repeal Of Arms Embargo but Great Majority Of Businessmen's Letters Favor Such Action

The Senate Office Building was struck by an avalanche yesterday, taking a frightful toll of headaches.

Senatorial secretaries and clerks, the principal victims, were busily digging themselves out last night; but they paused for a moment to smile and say, "You ain't seen nothin' yet."

From every point of the compass came the landslide of letters and telegrams on the neutrality issue. But its greatest intensity will probably be reached a week from now, when the debate is fairly under way.

These expressions of rank and file American sentiment are unanimous—up to a certain point. More than one impassioned appeal begins: "For God's sake, keep us out of war," and practically every letter contains in some form or another the same idea.

Differ on Method

But there the unanimity ends. Some think the best way to keep America out of war is to retain the arms embargo as it is; some think all neutrality legislation should be removed some believe in "cash-and-carry" for all exports, including arms.

Although a few letter writers apparently want to help England and France regardless of the consequences, in many offices it was reported that the majority—in the case of some Senators' mail, the overwhelming majority—of communications militantly call for retention of the arms embargo.

In the offices of two New England Senators, both Republican, a marked shift in sentiment from last winter has been noted. While proponents of the arms embargo are still strong, a far larger proportion of anti-embargo letters is now being received than was the case four months ago.

In this connection, it was observed by secretaries of two prominent Republicans that "a surprising number" of businessmen have written letters favoring repeal of the embargo.

500 to Borah

Following his speech in favor of the embargo Thursday night, Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, yesterday received over 500 telegrams, of which all but one or two were said to be commendatory.

Other isolationist Senators, such as Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, have been getting about 250 letters a day, with the ratio said to be five to one in favor of the present law.

Neutral political observers attributed some of the apparent embargo sentiment in Michigan to the influence of Father Coughlin, who spoke Sunday against repeal. However, the offices of two or three other Senators noted that their Coughlin-inspired mail was very much less than it was in January, when repeal of the Spanish embargo was under discussion.

Senator Taft (Republican, of Ohio, received 25,000 letters and telegrams as a direct result of Coughlin's defense of the embargo in January, while comparatively little of his mail could be directly attributed to that inspiration. Taft's office estimated he has been getting 150 letters a day.

A 100 per cent New Dealer, Senator Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island, was sent 3,300 telegrams from Coughlinites in January, but only 100 this week. His mail is reportedly "50-50" on the embargo question.

White Drafts Drastic Change In Civil Service

Report to Reed Body Will Involve Most Of Federal Personnel

Former Civil Service Commissioner Leonard D. White is drafting recommendations soon to be submitted to the President's Committee on Civil Service, entailing action far exceeding the committee's expected scope when it was created six months ago, The Post learned yesterday.

Before the end of the year Dr. White's report will be converted by the committee, headed by Supreme Court Justice Stanley Reed, into plans for the most thoroughgoing overhauling of the Federal personnel system in its history.

News of the preparation of the report by Dr. White, a member of the committee, and information that it will be presented to the Reed group within the next three weeks were the first breaks in the shroud of secrecy which has covered the committee's activities.

Extensive Changes Involved

Dr. White's study will be used by the Reed committee as the groundwork and point of departure for its own tentative report.

This, in turn, will be put in the hands of a selected group of persons and organizations who are expected to confer with the committee probably early in November. A final report to the President is planned for submission before January 1.

The scope of this report will go far beyond the controversy over the inclusion of professional employes, particularly lawyers, which brought about the committee's creation. Instead, it will deal with extensive changes in every phase of the Federal personnel system, including methods of recruitment, types and procedures of examination, organization of the Civil Service Commission itself, methods of certification and conditions of employment, such as salary ranges, promotions, discharges, transfers and training.

It was learned yesterday that Dr. White, now a political science professor at the University of Chicago, is working on what was described as "mountains of reports" compiled by various subcommittees and individuals in and out of the Government on special subjects.

Sub-Committees Report

The sub-committees set up by the Reed group, and which have now reported, are concerned with the enlistment and employment in the Government service of lawyers, economists, architects, administrators and scientists. The last group was subdivided into sections on engineers, natural scientists and social scientists.

Some of the special assignments which have been reported on include extensive statistical studies of the ages, numbers, turnover, grades, classifications and wages of Federal workers both in and out of the classified civil service; an analysis of the Civil Service Commission personnel and organization, an examination of present methods of recruitment, certification and examination, a study of the delays in making registers available and in classifying employes, a discussion on how to limit numbers taking examinations, and reports on selective certification, training facilities, salary increases, resignations and transfers.

Significantly, special reports were made on the controversial subjects of apportionment and veterans' preferences, and on reassigning inefficient personnel to other jobs.

Details Still Secret

Details of the sub-committee recommendations, those of Dr. White and the opinions of other committee members were still closely guarded secrets yesterday.

It was reported, however, that the sub-committee on lawyers in the Federal service had proposed that Government attorneys be given full civil service protection in their job status, and other advantages accruing to those in the classified system, but that their selection remain, as now, outside of the competitive examination procedure of the Civil Service Commission.

It was not believed that this recommendation would be accepted.

Two Categories

The Reed group's recommendations will fall into two categories, those which Congress must act on before they are effective, and those which the President, under powers already granted, can put into operation.

Members of the committee, besides the chairman and Dr. White, who is known for his stanch championship of the merit system and progressive personnel ideas, are Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter, Attorney General Frank Murphy, Gano Dunn, president of the J. G. White Engineering Co.; W. H. McReynolds, President Roosevelt's special assistant on personnel matters, and Gen. R. E. Wood, chairman of the Sears, Roebuck & Co. board.

Members of the sub-committees and special research experts, whose names have not been revealed, are said to be well-known experts in Government, industry and civil service fields.

3 Rockingham Youths Held on Theft Charge

Special Dispatch to The Post

Luray, Va., Sept. 15.—Two Rockingham County youths, Roy Lam, 19, and Richard McCoy, 17, are in Page County jail at Luray, facing charges of entering the Shenandoah Mills store early yesterday morning. A third, Guy Monger, faces a charge of stealing a pistol holster from a Shenandoah National Park automobile at Elkton.

Officers recovered $16.25 of the loot taken from the store, which was entered by jimmying the front door.

Enrollment Date Set

Registration of new members in the Columbia Light Opera Company will take place Monday night at 7:30 in the Thomas School, Twelfth and L streets northwest. Plans for the first production of the season will be outlined. There are vacancies for all voices, and new members will be welcomed.

Squalus Valve Fails in Naval Inquiry Test

Strengthens Belief It Caused Disaster; One Body Missing

By the Associated Press

Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 15.—Stepping into the dripping interior of the salvaged submarine Squalus shortly after removal of the bodies of 25 of her 26 dead—one of which remained missing—a naval board of inquiry today put its finger on the possible cause of the disaster.

In borrowed oilskins, the board watched a test operation of two air induction valves, saw one fail to close properly, and heard Lieut. Oliver F. Naquin, still skipper of the ill-fated craft, submit his belief that the valve behaved then as it did May 23 when the Squalus went down.

Earlier, the sea-battered craft relinquished her long-imprisoned dead as Navy friends and relatives found some consolation in an expert's opinion that the victims had died swiftly and mercifully.

Grim-faced, white-coated Navy hospital aides carried the 25 entombed for 115 days in the aft end of the submarine to an improvised morgue in the Navy Yard, where fingerprint and dental experts carefully carried on the work of identification.

Tonight, only one body remained unidentified. Two names remained on the list—Frank H. Schulte, machinist's mate, first class, of St. Louis, and Bascomb S. Scyphers, electrician's mate, first class, of Bristol, Va.

Speculation centered around the possibility that the body of one of the two had been given up to the sea through a hatch discovered open during difficult and dangerous salvage operations.

Inspect Control Room

The board of inquiry, headed by Rear Admiral William T. Tarrant, commandant of the First Naval District, spent the greater part of its first inspection day within the slime-covered walls of the dimly lighted control room.

Its attention sharpened by previous testimony that an open air intake valve might have sunk the now dry-docked Squalus, the board almost immediately tested two intakes, one for ventilation of the hull and the other to let air into the $4,000,000 submersible's engines.

Both valves were closed by the same lever, the smaller of the two banged shut. The other failed to budge until the gear, operating somewhat on the theory of hydraulic brakes, was pumped two or three times.

Most of the 25 bodies were found heaped in the after torpedo room at the foot of the ladder leading to an escape hatch similar to one through which 33 men in the forward compartments were saved through the Navy's first use of its 9-ton rescue bell.

Momsen Testifies

While the naval board was awaiting removal of the bodies, it took testimony from Lieut. Comdr. Charles B. Momsen, co-inventor of the Momsen escape lung, who played a major part in the salvage and rescue work. From him came these statements and suggestions:

That an induction valve was found open, strengthening the theory that that was the cause of the disaster.

That the navy was not as well prepared for salvage work as it might have been and that a group of salvage experts should be named to perfect plans for use in the event of future operations.

That some of the submarine valves were too close to the railings of the craft and that it took 180 turns of a wrench by a diver to close one valve.

From Momsen, too, came the opinion that the 26 "died in a few minutes." Water swept in so swiftly, the inspection revealed, that not one had time to reach for the Momsen lungs, in racks in the torpedo room.

Two Doctors Shot, Killed By Patients

Man With Black Mustache Sought in Jersey City Slaying

By the Associated Press

Jersey City, N. J., Sept. 15.—A supposed patient shot and killed Dr. David M. Marks in hsi office today as the physician, talking over the telephone with a fellow practitioner, remarked that "things are slow."

Dr. Marks, 44-year-old chief surgeon at the Hudson County General Hospital, called a man with a coal-black mustache from the waiting room into the inner office at his home and answered the telephone.

Things moved rapidly then. The shot rang out and then man with the mustache stepped back into the waiting room, police learned from Mrs. Matilda Blumberg, who was sitting there with her 5-year-old son, Sidney.

Nurse Caroline Ebersole, who said she was on the second floor with another patient, ran downstairs and asked the man where the physician was.

"He's all right," the man replied. "He's in there."

The man walked out as the nurse entered the consultation room, found her employer shot through the head, and called aid.

Police began a careful check of the surgeon's records in hope of obtaining a clew to the killer and his motive.

Slay's Doctor in Revenge

Pittsburgh, Sept. 15 (AP).—A man who told Detective Capt. Fraklin T. McQuaide he went "for revenge" to a doctor's office where he had been treated 15 years, shot and killed Dr. F. G. Leslie today and critically wounded his associate, Joseph Cerra.

Mike Koski, 46, who was charged with murder, told the captain that Cerra had given him treatments and finally discharged him as cured after collecting $1,500 in fees. He said an examination at a hospital disclosed he was not cured.

Civil Service Expansion Sped

The Administration, President Roosevelt said yesterday, is going ahead as fast as it can with the job of putting Government agencies under civil service.

He made the statement in response to press conference questions about a scheduled conference with Frederick M. Davenport, chairman of the council of personnel administration.

Mr. Roosevelt said the point had been reached where about all the agencies which could be placed legally under civil service were being put there.

Chicago Robbers Cow 12, Flee With $6,000

Chicago, Sept. 15 (AP).—Four men, wearing handkerchief masks and armed with revolvers and a sawed-off shotgun, took $6,000 from the Lawndale Real Estate Co. on the West Side today. The employes and two customers were forced to lie on the floor. The robbers escaped in a large sedan.

Action to Reorganize Magazine Dismissed

A proceeding to reorganize Toga Press, Inc., publisher of the suspended magazine, The Senator, was dismissed by Justice Bailey in District Court yesterday. S. G. Ingham, attorney for the publisher, told the court that financial support which the magazine had been expecting was impossible now because of the war in Europe.

Justice Bailey rejected a proposal of creditors that the company be declared a bankrupt.

Hoover Urges Body to Fix Bombing Guilt

Suggests Neutrals Form Commission Of War Observes

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 15.—Former President Hoover proposed today that north European neutral countries create an international commission to "observe and report" facts concerning "incidents of warfare upon civilian populations."

He said "the belligerent countries should be asked to give agents of this commission free movement within their borders."

"The purpose of this commission through these agents would be to determine where, and when, and whether these undertakings not to war on innocent men and women and children have been intentionally violated."

He suggested the commission "could well be organized by the northern European neutral nations—Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Finland, Holland and Belgium. I believe it would be accepted by the countries at war. I believe it would be supported by all the other neutral countries."

Elimination of propaganda and presentation of facts, he said, would "aid in keeping other nations out of this war." He termed the commission a "protection" to governments whose "intentions are honestly carried out within the limits of human fallibility."

"Of far more importance," he added, "such independent inspection will be a real deterrent on deliberate infraction of this undertaking. Such a determination of guilt would carry final conviction to the neutral world."

Matson, of Silver Spring, Md., another representative of the National Association.

Smith and Weiss Get 30 Months in Louisiana Fraud

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Sept. 15.—Federal prison sentences up to 30 months were imposed today on five prominent Louisianans convicted of using the mails to defraud Louisiana State University of $75,000.

Concurrent sentences of 30 months and fines of $1,000 on each of two fraud counts were meted out to Seymour Weiss, dapper New Orleans hotel man and key figure in the late Huey Long's political machine; Dr. James Monroe Smith, whose resignation as president of the State University precipitated widespread investigation of Louisiana politics, and Monte Hart, wealthy Louisiana contractor.

Louis C. Lesage, former Standard Oil official, and J. Emory Adams, nephew of Dr. Smith by marriage, were fined $500 and given concurrent sentences of a year and a day on each of two counts.

Wallace Cuts Cotton Quotas Third for 1940

12 Million Bales Set As Goal; Expects War To Reduce Demand

By the Associated Press

With the world supply of American cotton estimated to be the largest on record, Secretary Wallace yesterday proclaimed marketing quotas designed to keep production and sales of next year's crop at not more than 12,000,000 bales.

The quotas will be subject to approval of the 2,000,000 cotton producers in 20 Southern and Western States at a referendum to be conducted December 9. The affirmative vote of two-thirds of the farmers voting must be recorded to make the quotas operative. The ballot will be secret.

This is the third time that Wallace has invoked quota provisions of the 1938 farm act to prevent further accumulation of cotton. In the last two years, growers approved the control measure by overwhelming majorities.

Demand May Drop

The Secretary declared yesterday that the European war made the cotton situation a "difficult" one. He said that whatever the effects of the conflict may be on American cotton, the supplies in this country were "more than ample to meet any demand."

He has predicted, however, that the war will lessen foreign demand for American cotton, thereby complicating the surplus and "unfavorable" price situation in this country. The Agriculture Department now is drafting a Government loan program on this year's crop designed to keep prices from sagging below 8.3 cents a pound.

Under quotas, farmers who planted cotton in excess of their Government acreage allotments would be required to store cotton produced on the excessive acreage or pay a penalty tax of 3 cents a pound. Farmers who planted within their allotments would be free to sell all they produced.

Likewise, only farmers who planted within their allotments would be eligible for full benefit payments and Government cotton loans. The benefit rates have not yet been determined.

Acreage Cut Third

Wallace said the total indicated supply of American cotton on August 1 was 25,500,000 bales, of which slightly more than 11,000,000 bales are either stored under Government loans to producers or have been taken over by the Government as payment for such loans.

This indicated supply compares with a total domestic consumption and exports of 10,187,000 bales in the last season.

He said that not more than 26,500,000 acres should be seeded to cotton this year, compared with a normal seeded area of about 40,000,000 acres.

WPA Files Ready to Aid Mobilization

Hunter Says Lists Give Occupations Of 3,000,000

Howard O. Hunter, deputy administrator of the Works Progress Administration, announced yesterday that the WPA had occupational files on approximately 3,000,000 persons which might be added to the occupational files which the Government is assembling in case of industrial mobilization of the country for war.

He also reported that the WPA rolls stood at 1,660,567 on September 6, reflecting the final dismissal of persons who had been working on projects continuously for 18 months. This will open the rolls for thousands of relief clients who have been on the waiting list, he said.

WPA employment authorization limits the rolls to 1,800,000 for September and October, but up to date occupational records are available covering about 1,200,000 additional persons, officials said. This latter group includes those awaiting assignment to WPA jobs and other employable members of the WPA workers' families.

"The war in Europe undoubtedly will have a great effect on the economics of American industries," Hunter said. "In some industries employment is likely to increase rapidly as the result of war needs, whereas in other industries there may be, at least temporarily, sharp declines in employment."

If any significant changes should occur, they should be reported immediately to the Washington office, Hunter said, so that the necessary changes in employment quotas could be made.

Hunter urged that in the future special consideration be given to certain types of projects, including commercial and military airports. Previously the WPA road construction program has emphasized the development of a secondary highway system.

Deaths Reach 16 As End of Midwest Heat Wave Nears

By the Associated Press

Showers advancing from the northwest last night presaged the end of the severest September heat wave in the Midwest's history.

Deaths mounted to 16 as the heat besieged a wide area for the fourth straight day and was expected to hold its ground through most of today.

Cooling showers crept eastward and complete rout of the hot spell was forecast for late Sunday. Meanwhile, school children were dismissed early in Michigan, Missouri, Indiana, Illinois and Ohio. Crops and pastures wilted.

Radom Falls To Nazis; Peace Talk Renewed

Drive on Warsaw and Kutno Pushed; Lodz Resistance Reported

By Melvin K. Whiteleather,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Sept. 15.—German army communiques today told of new Nazi successes in Poland while diplomatic quarters renewed talk of possible peace prospects.

The communiques said Nazi forces continued pounding at two of three mainstays of Polish defense, Warsaw and Kutno. The third of these mainstays, at Radom, was reported annihilated.

The armies also were said to have entered Polish fortifications at Brest-Litovsk (Brzesc Nad Bugiem), 100 miles east of Warsaw, after fierce bombing activity by the air force, despite unfavorable weather, had paved the way. The fortifications were reported partly blown up and nine enemy armored cars destroyed.

"Polish war vessels still lying in the harbor of Heisternest were sunk by bombs," the communique asserted.

Talk of peace efforts by Premier Mussolini persisted with the return from Italy of the Italian Ambassador, Bernardo Attolico. The ambassador made a flying visit to his homeland after conferring with Nazi State Secretary Ernst von Weiszsaecker early in the week.

What was described as the biggest battle of the war ended the sixth day with the Polish troops still fighting like tigers against surrender north of the German-occupied city of Lodz, with the Polish troops putting up a stubborn defense.

German communiques paid scant attention to the war on the Western Front. They mentioned briefly active artillery east of Saarbruecken and reported the retreat of French forces back across the border south of Pirmasens under a heavy German artillery barrage.

Cities Must Cut Budgets

By Louis Lochner.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Sept. 15.—Every Geman city and commune, in addition to individual German citizens, must help pay the costs of the 1939 war, according to figures revealed tonight by two economic statistical services.

Gemeinde und Wirtschaft, correspondence service for municipal matters, estimated 1,250,000,000 marks—$500,000,000—must be contributed each year of the war by the cities and communes out of their receipts from taxation.

Each month, the figures showed, the cities and communes must divert 2½ per cent of receipts from taxes on agriculture and forestry undertakings, 5 per cent on real estate, 7½ per cent on business and 10 per cent of the tax on citizens.

While it was admitted such estimates could not be exact, Gemeinde und Wirtschaft said it believed its figures "conservative," and distributed as follows:

The tax on business and trade of all kinds to yield 700,000,000 marks annually for the special war chest; the citizens' tax, 130,000,000; real estate, 420,000,000; agriculture and forestry, 110,000,000.

That would total 1,360,000,000 marks. The service said the taxes were "absolutely certain" to produce at least 1,250,000,000 marks. (Nominal value of the mark is 40 cents.)

Cities and communes would not be permitted to "unload" this special war contribution payment onto individual taxpayers by increased rates. Instead, it was said, the money must be obtained from increased economy—paring down communal expenses.

That does not mean, however, that the citizen must not pay. He must reach deep into his pocket to hand over his share through six main channels, some affecting the individual directly, others indirectly.

Special Tax $1,000,000,000

The Reich expects to add to the war chest by:

A special war surtax on incomes, amounting to 50 per cent of the regular income tax.

A 20 per cent special war tax on retail prices of beer and tobacco.

A war tax on champagne of 1 mark a bottle.

A tax of 100 marks ($40) a 100 liters of cordials and liquers.

Cutting federal administrative costs 50 per cent.

Lowering wages and prices, thus further cutting public expenditures so the difference would be available for war needs.

Pressedienst Fuer Wirthchaftaufbau, another economic service, estimated receipts of the present income tax in Germany as more than 8,000,000,000 marks—equal to $2,000,000,000—annually. Thus the special income tax alone should yield 2,500,000,000 marks, or $1,000,000,000.

7 Japanese Fliers On Good-Will Hop Due Here Today

Seven good-will aviators, flying a twin-motored Japanese-made monoplane, are expected to land at Washington Airport at 1:30 p. m. today on another lap of their around the world flight.

The Japanese airmen began their tour August 27 with a 16-hour nonstop hop from Sapporo, Japan, to Nome, Alaska. They have stopped at Fairbanks, White Horse, Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Albuquerque, Chicago and New York.

After a three-day stay in Washington, the crew will fly the Nippon to Miami and on to South America.

cleared off the hills before the attack began.

At the same time, a secondary column drove straight north down the Moselle valley between the river and a railroad to the east.

As the Germans retreated down the valley, observers reported, they were ripping up the railroad tracks, obviously fearing a French attack toward their base at Trier, which is only a few thousand yards in front of the Siegfried Line. The railroad is the main northern communication between France and Germany.

Part of Sierck Taken

The general staff morning communique indicated the Germans were not guessing wrong. It reported that an offensive northeast of the frontier town of Sierck carried the French closer to Trier.

The advance, the communique said, gave the French assured "possession of an area in the region northeast of Sierck which has been disputed since a German offensive movement was reported in the evening communique of September 10."

"We have, besides, advanced beyond this region," it added.

Nazi authorities were reported to have removed all civilians of the entire region between the Siegfried Line and the frontier. It was estimated at least 1,000,000 women, children and old men had been moved, not only from the two large cities of Trier and Saarbruecken, but from the small mining towns as well.

Saarbruecken, the French say, is being gradually pinched off by their troops established on the heights east of the city which dominate a considerable sector to the rear.

All roads leading to the city from the German side are reported to have been destroyed by French guns pounding at the area day and night. The French said advance guards, which now are operating in units as large as battalions, had captured important positions east of the city, including two villages slightly to the rear.

Military sources said fast squad cars dashed into the villages ahead of the infantry patrols, spraying houses held by Nazi troops with machine-guns and light cannon. They declared that thin lines of infantry, followed by motorized units, spread out through fields and along secondary roads in the vicinity.

Advance Slow, Cautious

The French were described as taking no chances as they closed in around Saarbruecken. The advance slowed down after the capture of each important position to give the main bodies time to consolidate their lines for the next drive.

The war on the Western Front is still one in which gains are measured in yards instead of miles; a war in which the capture of small clusters of houses too tiny to appear even as names on the map figures as a distinct advantage.

The German advance lines appeared tonight to start at the small village of Besch, 2½ miles within German territory on the Moselle River, and on a railroad line running from Metz to Trier.

From Besch, a German line of blockhouses and machine-gun nests runs parallel to the frontier 12 miles southeast to Merzig, where it reaches the Saar River. From Merzig the German positions run in front of the river past the town of Saarpoulis to Saarbruecken.

In the eastern suburbs of Saarbruecken the front dips back in a and, at the mouth, is 6 miles wide. At the eastern end of the "V," the front straightens back to meet the Siegfried Line 10 miles southeast of Zweibruecken.

The entire 60 miles of active front between the Siegfried and Maginot lines takes the general form of a curve which bulges toward the Maginot Line.

Heavy Blow Awaited

By G. H. Archambault.
Copyright by New York Times.

Paris, Sept. 15.—Intense activity on the Western Front is of a nature heralding action on a large scale. The German reaction tends to support this forecast—heavy fire on the French rear to prevent the movements of supporting troops and attempts by low-flying planes to rake first line positions. This is the kind of reaction when a heavy blow is expected.

Activity is greatest in the 12-mile sector facing Saarbruecken, east of the Saar River. There the French still progressed today taking two more villages and a hill. But their chief work at present is the preparation of positions from which to initiate "ulterior operations."

Despite increasing resistance the French have never relaxed their pressure and never lost the initiative. Concentration of their forces is drawing to a close and the armies are nearly all in position. The British units are being fitted into the strategic plan as fast as they arrive, although it is understood only the Royal Air Force has been in action up to now.

The Germans' activity may presage a blow on their part. Counter-attacks are to be expected, but a general offensive is a difficult proposition when the opponent has been steadily imposing his will. Moreover, the Germans are continuing to evacuate the populations of the Saarland and Palatinate. Their radio admitted this today for the first time.

'Shelled, Sinking,' Ship Calls Aid

By the Associated Press

Chatham, Mass., Sept. 15.—Distress calls from an unidentified ship, saying she was "going down" after "being shelled by a submarine," were intercepted at 3:41 p. m. (E. S. T.) today by the radio marine station here.

From Belfast came word that the 5,200-ton freighter, Fanad Head, owned by the Ulster Steamship Co., of Belfast, has been attacked by a submarine. The vessel was bound from Montreal to Belfast.

The marine station did not itself hear the distressed ship's call, but said it picked up the call as relayed by several other ships.

Radio Marine operators said they presumed the ships were "somewhere" along the South Atlantic Coast."

Neither the distressed ship's call letters nor her position were contained in the message.

The message, as picked up by the Radio Marine station, read:

"Some ship with loud signal sent distress signals on 600 meters, saying 'Shelled by submarine; going down.' Nothing further heard. Ships please keep lookout."

The Radio Marine station said the vessel relaying the message failed to furnish her identity but that "the signals were of such volume we are certain she is not far away."

Some Canadians Aboard

Montreal, Sept. 15 (Canadian Press).—W. R. Eakin, president of McLean Kennedy, Ltd., said tonight "there may have been eight or ten Canadian passengers" aboard the Irish freighter Fanad Head, reported attacked by a submarine off Ireland.

Eakin's company acts as agents for the 5,200-ton Ulster Steamship Co. liner.

totalitarian governments that would constitute the most positive threat to every truly democratic government that the world has yet seen."

Starnes declared the United States should immediately repeal the mandatory arms embargo.

Representative Izac (Democrat), of California, member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, said:

"This is just what I have been afraid of. If Russia and Japan ever get together, it will bring the war closer to our shores."

Izac said he had recommended "all along" lifting the arms embargo.

Russian Claims Approved

Berlin, Sept. 15 (U.P.).—Soviet Russia is "concerning herself" with the fate of 11,000,000 White Russians and Ukrainians in the areas of East Poland that belonged to Czarist Russia before the world war, the official German news agency, DNB, said today.

The statement gave approval to a rather cryptic editorial in the official communist party newspaper Pravda in Moscow assailing Poland's "exploitation" of the white Russian and Ukrainian minorities.

Nazi government officials insisted, however, that there is no confirmation to be had for reports that Germany is negotiating with Russia on the question of the White Russian and Ukrainian minorities.

Buffer State Forecast

The statement was made in reference to unconfirmed reports that Germany and Russia have agreed to creation of a "buffer" Polish state after the Nazi military operations there are completed and that the White Russian and Ukrainian minorities might eventually be restored to Russia.

In connection with the mystery surrounding Soviet Russia's intentions—some extremist Nazis are predicting imminent Soviet military action against the Poles—the question of how close to Russia the new German frontier will be placed continued to be the subject of speculation.

The amount of Polish territory which Fuehrer Adolf Hitler will see fit to keep for either political or economic needs or military necessity is being discussed now that Nazi military operations east of the Vistula have reached what the Germans call "mopping-up" stages.

New Trade Talks Start

Many competent observers here incline to the opinion Hitler intends to restore an eastern frontier roughly along the lines of the Brest-Litovsk Treaty of 1918, when central Poland was created as a "buffer state" against Russia.

This would give Germany control of the headwaters of the Vistula and Bug rivers and, more important, the main railroad line from Cracow to Lwow (Lemberg) and to Russia in territory formerly Austrian.

The Polish Corridor and Posnan undoubtedly will be kept by Germany, as well as a chunk of territory adjoining the southern border of East Prussia above Warsaw.

This would be sufficient, it is contended in Berlin, to secure Germany's gains strategically and economically and still leave adequate space for protection of the new eastern border.

It was reported in German trade quarters today that new Soviet-German economic talks are under way, aimed at increasing Germany's recent trade credit of 200,000,000 marks (roughly $30,000,000 to double that amount.

Berlin Zoo to Keep Only One Pair Of Each Species

Copyright, 1939, by N. Y. Herald-Tribune.

Berlin, Sept. 15.—Noah's plan of marching the animals two by two into his Ark will be followed by Germany's most famous zoo.

Hans Hagenbeck, director of the Hagenbeck Zoological Gardens in Hamburg—long considered the greatest zoo in the world—announced tonight that only one male and one female of every species in the zoo will be kept, no matter what happens to western Europe in the next few months.

All the other animals will find refuge with Germany's new ally, Soviet Russia, Hagenbeck announced. The Russians have agreed to return them intact at the end of the war, or to replace them with rare Russian and Asiatic animals.

heavily reinforced by mechanized units, pushed across the Bug River to Siedlce—cutting Poland's main communications to the east—began encircling Brest-Litovsk and pushed southward toward Lublin and Radom.

Polish quarters still insisted that there was an opportunity to drive the Germans back because the German penetration is not along a continuous front but merely by means of thinly stretched mobile units.

If a noose is drawn around the main Polish army, these Polish quarters said, the soldiers of Marshal Smigly-Rydz may resort to guerrilla warfare in counter-attacks on the thin line of German forces encircling them.

Rumania Bars Frontier

From Bucharest tonight came word that Rumania had barred her frontiers to the bulk of thousands of Polish refugees fleeing before the invading German armies.

An official communique stated that "all private persons" from Poland, especially from Galicia, where the percentage of Jews is high, were barred from entrance into Rumania.

The communique dashed the hopes of most of some 10,000 Jewish refugees congesting the Polish side of the Rumanian border seeking entry.

It declared that in view of the situation on Rumania's northern border, and in order to fulfill Rumania's obligations of neutrality, the following had been decided:

Children and wounded will be treated in accordance with the laws of humanity.

Troops to Be Interned

Foreign troops and other fighting units crossing the border will be disarmed and interned for the duration of hostilities.

Refugees who held political positions will be ordered to remain in certain towns and must undertake to abstain from all political activities.

The entrance of private persons into Rumania, especially those from the Galician region, is strictly forbidden.

The last point obviously was intended to keep Jewish refugees out of Rumania.

With the Polish-German war but two weeks old yesterday the question now asked is how it happened that Poland, with her unquestionably strong, well-trained, well-equipped army, has been brought near to defeat in such a short time.

Used Franco's Tactics

The Germans in Poland used on a colossal scale the tactics adopted by Gen. Franco in the latest stage of the Spanish civil war. They made masterly use of the fact that the extremely long twisted and curved Polish-German frontier is unfortified and not even adequately equipped with tank traps. They descended on Poland with an overwhelmingly enormous force of bombing planes, tanks and other motorized units.

The few hundred bombers which during the first days of the war raided Polish cities and villages all over the country are continuing their murderous and destructive work, but these are only a fraction of the tremendous forces used on the front lines. The terrific barrage of air bombs could only be resisted by a counter-attack of air forces equal to the aggressor's—but the proportion of Polish air forces and mortorized units to the Germans is as one to five, if not worse.

The bombing barrage on reserve areas is making impossible any effective work by the Polish artillery and is hampering troop concentrations. Polish communications are used to open a way for the motorized units, which thrust forward at great speed along roads greatly improved by the Poles in the last three years, and even acros flat country, the surface of which has been hardened by ten weeks of drought.

Army Is Demoralized

The Polish population behind the fighting lines appears to be in the grip of desolation, hunger and suffering difficult to express with words. The army is demoralized.

German Drive Slows

By Otto D. Tolischus
Copyright by The New York Times.

Berlin, Sept. 15.—For the first time since the German armies invated Poland, exactly two weeks ago, the spectacular German advance appeared to be slowing up today as the battles of Kutno and Warsaw thundered into the fifth day.

According to the German army communique: "Very strong desperately resisting forces, surrounded at Kutno, attempted again yesterday to break through to the southeast." The same communique also reports a Polish attempt to break the iron ring around Warsaw toward the east.

Both of these counterattacks, said the communique, were repelled but the battle is continuing and while they continue, German efforts to conclude the Polish campaign as quickly as possible and then perchance to launch a peace offensive are delayed. The longer delayed the wider becomes the scene of operation in the west, on land, sea and air, which in turn is beginning to compel the shifting of men and material from the east to the west, reducing the chances of a peace offensive to the minimum.

For that reason, while expressing involuntary admiration of Polish heroism, and attributing the desperate resistance of the five Kutno divisions in particular to the fact they consist mainly of troops from Posen, trained in Germany before the war, German quarters are also growing increasingly bitter about what they characterized as unnecessary bloodshed.

In the German view any further Polish resistance is hopeless because according to German calculation, however, many men the Polish army may have recruited, it had only 30 to 35 fully equipped divisions of which 20 are counted to have been annihilated, dispersed or trapped with losses of some 100,000 dead and wounded and another 100,000 taken prisoners.

The German heap, therefore, grave reproaches upon the Polish government and the Polish army command for continuing the hopeless struggle even to the extent of arming the civilian population urging the soldiers to resist to the last, with the false argumentation that the Germans kill any prisoners they take.

Nazis Growing Bitter

This growing German bitterness and determination to make an end of Poland quickly, explains the German air bombardment of the "eastern edge of Warsaw," which, in view of resistance, is now characterized as a fortress, with the further bombing of railroad lines and stations throughout eastern Poland, while bombers and combat planes continue to bombard and machine-gun troops at Kutno.

At the same time the army communique also recorded two important German successes. East of the Vistula River, German troops began closing in from the northeast and the southwest on the Warsaw suburb, Praga, from which Pilsudski launched his coup in 1926. The troops before Brest-Litousk, penetrated into the fortification zone, blowing up several forts, although the citadel itself is still in Polish hands.

The rest of the army communique about the eastern campaign today is largely a repetition of yesterday's communique, although it also reported the sinking of more Polish warships in the harbor of Heisternest on the Hel Peninsula.

French Repulsed, Nazis Say

Regarding the west front, the communique records "enemy artillery activity east of Sarbruecken," the only success of which the German army quarters insist was the destruction of the Saarbruecken Cathedral. French forces which, September 12 crossed the German border at Schwiex, a border town south of Pirmasens, are reported to have retreated before the German artillery fire.

Fuehrer Hitler inspected his troops advancing before Lwow, and watched two German divisions crossing the San River pursuing Polish forces reported to be thoroughly demoralized. At Brauchitsch, at the same time, he inspected front line troops and "discussed with front line commanders necessary measures."

British Free Liner With 250 From U. S.

Rotterdam, Sept. 15 (AP).—The Holland-America liner Nieuw Amsterdam arrived tonight with 250 passengers from New York after being released by the British admiralty, which held the vessel for three days in the Downs, off the southeast English coast.

Capt. Byl reported that the British removed three German passengers and 16 German crew members for further investigation. Fifty German passengers were allowed to remain aboard.

Drive to Cut Off Poles From Rumania; Biddle Among Refugees

By Elmer W. Peterson,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cernauti, Rumania, Sept. 15.—Foreign diplomats fleeing Poland arrived here tonight with reports of a tremendous new German drive through southeast Poland designed to cut off Poland from Rumania.

The caravan of diplomats which arrived at this town just across the Polish border included the American Ambassador to Poland, Anthony J. D. Biddle, Mrs. Biddle, their daughter Peggy Thompson Schulz, and Mrs. Biddle's secretary, Mary McKenzie. It was their fourth move since leaving bomb-wrecked Warsaw.

Mme. Beck Flees

Others in the party of 60 which reached here at 6 o'clock tonight (noon E. S. T.) included Mme. Josef Beck, wife of the Polish foreign minister, and their three children, and diplomatic representatives of Brazil, Spain, Italy, Belgium, Sweden, Japan, the Netherlands and Switzerland.

Cernauti, already overcrowded, offered few accommodations, and most of the diplomatic refugees arranged to leave quickly for Bucharest. Mme. Beck is on her way to Paris.

The diplomats said they left Zaleszcyki, an emergency Polish government headquarters, because of threatened raids by German warplanes. They reported planes flew over the town yesterday and there were numerous alarms, but no bombs were dropped.

The diplomats reported refugee conditions in the vicinity of Zaleszcyki, a village on the Polish-Rumanian border, were becoming desperate with indications of a possible famine among those fleeing before the Nazi war-machine.

Members of the diplomatic group said Germany apparently now was determined to cut off Poland from Rumania, regardless of the price to be paid for a swift advance. A touch of the rainy season already appeared to spur the new offensive and complete it before operations were bogged in mud.

Polish reports at the frontier quoted captured German pilots as saying the best German airmen were being saved for the western front, although members of the famous Spanish Condor Legion were among those in the eastrn front airforce.

These reports said youths of 17 and 18 were among German warplane crews.

It was reported here that the Germans are now employing fully 2,000 airplanes on the Eastern Front, bombing troop concentrations, patroling and carrying on observation flights over the entire area.

Under the circumstances, it was pointed out, there is no longer any "rear" to the war.

Nazi Paper Assails Biddle

By the United Press.

Berlin, Sept. 14.—The semi-official Deutscherdienst charged tonight that Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, United States ambassador to Poland, "evidently" is trying to play the role of the World War American ambassadors to Paris and London and drag the United States into the present war.

The charge was made in the publication's comment on Biddle's report to the American State Department that Germans were indiscriminately bombing civilian objectives in Poland.

Canada Names Loring Christie Envoy to U. S.

Ottawa, Sept. 15 (Canadian Press).—Loring Christie, veteran member of the Civil Service, who has been connected with the external affairs department since 1913, today was appointed Canadian Minister to Washington.

He succeeds Sir Herbert Marler, who resigned because of ill health.

Christie will leave immediately to take over his Washington post. He is a native of Nova Scotia and a graduate of the Harvard Law School. The new envoy was appointed legal adviser to the department of external affairs in 1913, and throughout the World War was associated closely with Sir Robert Laird Borden, Canada's wartime premier.

31 Polish Planes Downed, Nazis Say

Berlin, Sept. 15 (AP).—The German high command reported tonight that a total of 31 Polish battle plans had been destroyed today on the Eastern Front.

The command said the German air force caused such havoc on the railways and roads east of the Vistula River that the retreat of Polish forces was greatly hindered.

Federation of Eastern States Meets for Its 8th Convention; Assistant Secretary Of Labor Dimock to Speak Tomorrow

Resolutions of loyalty to the United States in any emergency that may grow out of the European war will be presented today to 1,500 members of the Syrian and Lebanese American Federation of the Eastern States, gathered here for their eighth convention.

Marshall E. Dimock, Assistant Secretary of Labor, will be guest of honor and chief speaker at the banquet to be held at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow in the Willard Hotel.

Other speakers include Virginia E. Jenckes, former Representative from Indiana; Dr. Philip K. Hitti, Princeton University; Charles Bey Corm, commissioner general of the Republic of Lebanon to the New York World's Fair, and Shaikh Mustafa El Ibrahim, Royal Iraqi consul.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Superintendent of Police, and Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal will represent the District at the dinner.

Delegate will be taken on a tour of the Federal Bureau of Investigation at 10 a. m. today. The opening business session takes place at 11:30 a. m. at the Willard. A Syrian motion picture, "Yaha-El-Hub," will be shown in the small ballroom at 2:30 and 6:30 p. m. today and at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow.

The Syrian Club, of Washington, host organization, will give a dinner in honor of delegates at 6:30 tonight. A dance will follow.

Still Inconsistent

For a statesman whose record is studded with inconsistencies, Senator Borah has taken a curious position. He argues that consistency requires the United States to maintain the present embargo on arms, munitions and implements of war. What in the past he has looked upon as the "hobgoblin of small minds" he now, apparently, regards as a prime virtue.

In his radio address Friday night the Senator from Idaho pointed out that the neutrality law, when it was enacted in 1937, had the almost unanimous support of both houses of Congress, that it met with the approval of the executive department and was overwhelmingly supported by the great majority of the American people.

One need not take issue with this statement to point out, however, that, in the opinion of many students of the subject at that time and since, a mandatory neutrality policy was fraught with grave dangers which would become apparent the moment war broke out in Europe, if not sooner. The viewpoint of such authorities has become the viewpoint of an increasingly large number of Americans. The impact of present realities is destroying past illusions.

Mr. Borah is far more his old self when he argues that lifting the arms embargo would constitute intervention by the United States on behalf of one side in the war against the other. But if that is the case, then the United States is already intervening to the hilt.

We may not be shipping arms, munitions and implements of war to belligerents. We are, however, placing no legal barriers in the way of the sale and shipment of foodstuffs, scrap iron, cotton, copper, petroleum and other essentials fully as important to nations at war as are actual bullets and airplanes. Only Great Britain and France are in a position to benefit by such sales. Apparently that does not disturb Mr. Borah. At any rate, he very carefully refrained from suggesting that the embargo should be made complete.

It would have been consistent on Mr. Borah's part to suggest an embargo on everything that the belligerents have listed as contraband. But he knows that the American people would not stand for it. And an increasing number feel that arms, munitions and implements of war belong in the same category as the raw materials out of which they are made and the fuel which makes them operate.

War On Civilians

Germany's war against Poland had been in progress two weeks when the Nazi high command repudiated its pledge to refrain from bombing civilian populations. During that period the German military machine had made astounding progress, leaving frightful destruction in its wake. But the crushing of Poland was not sufficiently rapid to satisfy Herr Hitler. So he used the defense activities of Polish civilians as an excuse for the announcement that heavy artillery and bombardment from the air will be employed to demonstrate to Polish towns "the futility of their resistance."

Even before the announcement was made Nazi bombers were apparently attempting to terrorize the population. American Ambassador Biddle reported a few days ago that the open village where Poland has established a temporary capital was subjected to a rain of death from the skies. His previous report indicated that while Nazi bombers were "ostensibly appearing" to confine their destruction to military objectives, they were taking advantage of every opportunity, "without regard to the danger to civilian population which may be involved."

It is evident that Hitler kept his pledge to President Roosevelt for only the brief period during which that course seemed convenient. His ruthless tactics have created a very grave problem for the British and French. Both these powers are obviously desirous of avoiding unrestricted aerial warfare. They do not wish to see London and Paris destroyed, even though attacks upon those cities would give them an excuse to destroy Berlin. So for the time being they are refraining from acceptance of the challenge that Hitler has thrown down to them in Poland.

Prime Minister Chamberlain told Parliament that Great Britain "will never resort to deliberate attack on women and children or other civilians for purposes of mere terrorism." But that statement leaves a wide latitude for retaliation in kind against German bombings. Indeed, the Allies will be forced to attack German cities from the air if a similar policy is initiated by Germany in respect to their own great centers of population.

Pope Pius' latest appeal to the belligerents to conduct a humane war comes, therefore, at a moment when the hope of avoiding unprecedented slaughter of civilians seems to be very slender. It must not be supposed, however, that efforts to uphold international agreements against wanton destruction of noncombatants are futile. The outcome of this struggle in Europe may depend upon the public opinion that is now in the process of being formulated. In shaping their future course nations now at peace will not merely take into account the question of initial war guilt; they will also ask where the chief responsibility lies for making it a war of frightfulness.

Mr. Hull's Reminder

Secretary Hull has very properly called attention to the fact that the United States "has not abandoned any of its rights as a neutral under international law."

To be sure, domestic legislation at present in force in the United States places certain restrictions on Americans in their dealings with belligerents. They are prohibited, for instance, from selling arms, munitions and implements of war to nations involved in the European struggle. Steps have also been taken by the Government to cut to the minimum the number of Americans permitted to go abroad. Present legislation also makes possible the regulation of credit facilities that may be extended here to warring states.

These and similar measures which have been or may be put into force in this country are of a self-denying nature. The United States has no obligation under international law thus to restrict its activities in wartime. Its action resulted from a belief, valid or otherwise, that such a policy will keep the Nation out of war. But these measures give no belligerent nation any authority whatsoever to infringe on any rights which the United States enjoys as a neutral. On the contrary, Secretary Hull has warned belligerents that the Government "reserves all rights of the United States and its nationals under international law and will adopt such measures as may seem most practical and prudent when those rights are violated by any of the belligerents."

Such an admonition is decidedly to the point. But it may be ineffective until the American position is clarified. The last war proved that the rights of a neutral are respected only to the extent that reprisals are feared if these rights are infringed. A neutral which has gone out of its way, as has the United States, to place on its statute books such an unprecedented self-denying ordinance as the existing neutrality law is in danger of giving the impression that its protests can be ignored with impunity.

For well over a century the United States was in the forefront of those insisting that neutrals had rights which belligerents must respect. Secretary Hull's statement stems from that fine tradition. But during recent years we have been indulging in a headlong retreat from the policy of maintaining our neutral rights. We have done much to convince the world that we are more interested in avoiding a conflict than in defending our rights.

By insisting at this time on the maintenance of our neutral rights under international law, Secretary Hull is, however, helping keep the record straight. In emphasizing what our traditional position has been he puts the belligerents on notice that the existing neutrality law does not necessarily represent the last word in our policy.

Effective "In Spirit"

Secretary Morgenthau has stated that the tripartite monetary agreement with France and Great Britain is still "in effect." He admits, however, that the stabilization fund is "pretty much inoperative," since the imposition by the French and British governments of rigid restrictions on foreign exchange transactions.

At best, the agreement was a very poor substitute for the automatic controls over the exchanges that existed when the gold standard was functioning. But it did serve to eliminate erratic fluctuations in the currencies of the participating countries. With the approach of war, however, the British authorities abandoned efforts to maintain the dollar-sterling rate at the level at which it had been pegged for some time. Instead, they permitted the pound to slide rapidly downward as a means of conserving the country's gold supply and arresting the flight of capital.

As Mr. Morgenthau rather pathetically avers, the spirit of the agreement has doubtless not been violated. The outbreak of war forced a realignment of currencies. It is also true, no doubt, that the experience gained by Treasury officials during the past three years in operating a system of exchange control will make it easier for them to handle the problems of wartime exchange and to advise our businessmen.

That, however, is about all that can be said for a control plan originally hailed as an instrumentality for bringing order and comparative stability into a world of disordered exchanges. Although the breakdown of the monetary agreement was not a matter of volition, its involuntary character does not make the outcome any less disappointing.

Mostly Good Fortune

A large element of good fortune is involved in the completion of arrangements for construction of the Ridge road low-rent housing project. Indeed, the final award of the construction contract seems attributable more to good luck than to good management.

It is a matter of regret to every one that the low bid on this project exceeded the architect's estimates, although it was within the limits previously agreed upon by the Alley Dwelling Authority and the United States Housing Authority and far below the statutory maximum. No doubt the ADA was disappointed by the amount of the lowest bid. But after eliminating some items, the agency recommended acceptance of the contract thus offered. It was unwilling to accept all of the economies suggested by the USHA and especially loath to await the preparation of new plans.

When the question of accepting the contract was then laid before the USHA there were indications that building prices may be considerably higher a few months hence. The European war had been in progress nearly a week. That fact was emphasized in the ADA's request for approval of the McShain bid. It is difficult to understand why the USHA rejected the proposal, and then suddenly changed its mind. Nevertheless, the authority is to be congratulated for recognizing its mistake in time to avoid delays that might have proved costly to both taxpayers and slum dwellers.

Anti-Haircraft

For several years the most fashionable way for a young woman to wear her hair was straight down to the shoulders. This was followed by the upswing coiffure. Hair was cut shorter and what was left, piled high on the head.

There were only a few places left to go from there. Either it could be worn higher or lower, or straight out to the side. A little of all three seems to have crept into the styles demonstrated to the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association now meeting in New York.

One of these, for instance, goes down on the forehead in front, up on the sides and down in the back. Which is all right if it appeals to the young ladies. What we can't understand, is that the inventor of this remarkable coiffure is attempting to blame its inspiration on the war. He calls it the "aircraft" coiffure, and has neatly placed a miniature antiaircraft gun on the top curl.

Then there is the whirlpool coiffure, part of which goes up, the other part down and around, if you see what we mean. The designer maintains it is meant to represent the state of the world, but it will probably add to the general confusion. Thirdly, there is the camouflage, which accomplishes just the opposite from what camouflage is meant to achieve. It makes the wearer an unmistakable target, an easy mark.

It isn't that we object to any of these creations. Only why blame the current angle of women's curls on the war? Certainly none of the predecessors to this year's style was ever known as the peacetime dove or the stock market crash. The situation would be different if all the hair were neatly clipped from the head. This style might quite properly be dubbed the gas mask shave or the air raid precaution. And thank you anyway, but we'll take ours as usual—straight.

The Devil May Care

From the Chicago Daily News

A distinguished personage, formerly famous, almost a household word in fact, and who is believed still to have a large personal following throughout the world, but who has been persistently ignored in current news, headlines and editorial comment, broke into the dispatches last Wednesday.

With ancient ceremonials, a Scottish village chased out the devil. This ancient rite is supposed to keep him away for a year.

The exiled Siamese royal family now residing in England carried out an old family ritual for giving the devil the bum's rush for the benefit of a new baby five weeks old, son of the adopted son of exiled King Prajadhipok. A part of this ceremony consists of cutting a lock of the baby's hair, wrapping it in a lotus leaf and letting it float away on the nearest stream.

This, and other gestures, is supposed to rid the infant of undesired companionship with the devil. It is a sort of reversal of the formula still surviving in parts of the United States whereby a desirable stray dog is kept on the farm. That ritual calls for cutting six hairs off the end of the dog's tail, burying three under the kitchen steps and burning three in the kitchen stove.

It all sounds foolish, until one recalls recent prewar news from Europe. Subjected to that test, however, shamanism and voodoo come out well. The objective at least is clear. Evil is personified and dealt with directly—not diplomatically.

"The Athenia"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The horrifying circumstances surrounding the sinking of the Athenia will readily recall to the mind and memory of the older generation the slogan "Remember the Maine!" which furnished the motif of the Spanish-American War 41 years ago. We awoke one morning to find an American battleship was sunk in the harbor of Havana. The Spaniards were accused of perpetrating the deed which aroused the wrath of the Nation. The charge was repelled with equal indignation.

But public passion was aroused to such a pitch that technical ascertainment was held in abeyance until Spain had been driven out of the Western Hemisphere. When national passion is aroused it boots little to resort to deliberate judicial procedure. When there was talk of leaving the determination of the dispute to an international commission, a distinguished statesman of that day declared that if he had his way he would send to Cuba a negotiating commission on an American battleship, but added that there would be little need of the commission until the battleship had spoken the last word.

The sinking of the Athenia, allegedly by a German submarine, precipitates an international situation on all fours with the sinking of the Maine. "You did"—"I didn't" will be bantered back and forth between Germany and England with the rising passion of two pugnacious boys, with the United States echoing the refrain.

Even today, 40 years after the event, it is not known with scientific certainty where the guilt lies. The findings of the commission of investigation did not alter the conviction of either side. To modify Shakespeare's expression, "to the impassioned partisan 'trifles light as air are confirmation strong as Holy Writ.'" The accuser cannot be wrong, the accused cannot be right, and vice versa.

When passion has been heated to the boiling point a word and a blow swiftly outruns reason and logic. Will history repeat itself? Will "Remember the Athenia" become the dynamic slogan of the impending world conflict?

Lifting The Embargo

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Together with my friends I have a distinct feeling of being yellow in not lifting the embargo and in standing on the sidelines and watching the fight for democracy. The embargo as it stands today is a great asset to the dictators. Also it has had an element of hypocrisy in our allowing war supplies to go to Japan based on the technicality of nondeclaration of war.

The Gallup poll evidences that the majority of our people want the embargo lifted. If this is true, as it appears to be, then why, in a country which boasts of being ruled by "the people," this delay in lifting it?

The war today stands for our democracy as well as for the others—this opinion I believe is shared by the majority of United States citizens and not by the minority. To offer all our aid to the Allies would be a gesture of confidence to the Allies and a definite opinion of disapproval against aggression.

It does not seem to me that such outspoken expression of opinion and conscience conflicts in any way with a neutrality law nor would it increase involvement in war. But it does go to show the desire of the American people to help those fighting for democracy and thus the will of the people is made evident to the legislators.

It is generally conceded that there never will be any civilization or security in the entire world under Hitler's conquest mania.

ISABEL VICKERS.

A Canadian Point Of View

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just read in the Toronto Star a reprint of your today's editorial on the anomalies (to say the least) of the United States neutrality law. The Star's reprint quotes you as saying: "We cannot be indifferent to Canada's fate. But at the same time we are denying her the supplies needed to prosecute a war which she deems vital to her safety."

With all due respect, I submit to you that the very fact of Canada's entry into the war has made success for Canada and her Allies vital to the safety of the entire North American Continent. Because, having entered the war, Canada must now accept the outcome, whatever it be; especially so as, for the first time in her history, she has declared war as an independent belligerent and not as a colony or dominion of England.

If, unhappily, the outcome should be defeat for the Allies, then Canada can expect to pass under the domination of the totalitarian victors, whoever they may be, before this war ends. And this applies not only to Canada but also to Newfoundland, Bermuda and the British West Indies.

If this should occur, what would be the position of the United States? The 3,000 miles of undefended border between us which is now a peace asset, would become a tremendous potential war liability for the United States. And if the United States, even for its own safety, decided to implement President Roosevelt's pledge to Canada, which all Canadians greatly welcomed, and which he reaffirmed yesterday, would it be able to do so?

The task of the United States Navy would be tremendous, because whatever remained of the British and French fleets would have gone to swell the fleet of Germany and her allies, just as Germany's fleet was handed over to the Allies after the last war. If, in addition, there should be a threat on the Pacific, the task of the United States Navy would indeed be gigantic, if not insuperable.

Therefore, it seems to Canadians, that even from the practical point of view of its own safety, the United States should make it possible for Canada and her Allies to obtain the supplies necessary to wage a successful war. Over and above this point of view, there is the fundamental issue of the war. Canada hasn't gone in "to pull England's chestnuts out of the fire;" she has done so because, as an independent democracy, she feels that Hitlerism and all that it represents must be broken, or else democracy and all that it means will vanish from the earth.

Quite frankly, most Canadians feel that the United States, as the greatest democracy in the world, should be equally or more interested in the same objective. Certainly the United States has been as emphatic as any other democracy in the past few years in condemning Hitlerism and all that it stands for; its press has been unanimous on the subject, and its government withdrew its Ambassador from Germany many months ago. If, now that the time for words is ended and the time for action has come, the United States does not feel it should join in that action, then certainly the least it can do is to make its supplies available for those who do.

In Answer To Mr. Neibling

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There appeared in The Post of September 11 a letter from Carl A. Neibling, president of the German League of the United States, wherein he states that "The United States cannot go to defense of British stupidity and perfidy again. If this country does get in it should go to war on the side of Germany."

I wonder if the writer is aware that the peoples of the United States do not favor dictators, and will have none of them. Our preference is for democratic government.

How long would a United States League of Germany last in Mr. Neibling's native land, if its president dared to disseminate such ideas as those expressed in his letter?

MARY NEWCOMB.
Washington, Sept. 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with amazement the "Heil Hitler" letter in The Post, written by Carl A. Neibling, president of the German-American League of the United States, from Kansas City, in which he eulogized Hitler and suggested that if the United States does go to war that we should fight on the side of Germany.

I wonder if Carl A. Neibling is on his way back to fight for his beloved Hitler that he "heils" so blithely. Maybe he would like the regimentation in Germany! Maybe he would like to be told that if he listened to a foreign broadcast he would be shot!

As for fighting for Germany, the United States learned to her sorrow in the last war that all foreign countries wanted with us was to furnish the money and the men to help get more land and power for them. "Uncle Shylock" they called us, and like Shylock we did not get our "pound of flesh." Let Europe fight her own battles, furnish her own money, and kill her own men.

Let us be strictly neutral, keep our youth home, and not bury them on foreign soil.

BESSIE I. KOEHL.
Washington, Sept. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Carl A. Neibling's letter in The Post of September 11 tells all Americans that only a Hitler stooge would analyze the situation as he has. If there wasn't a Hitler, this world would be at peace today. I don't blame him for calling the British stupid; had they any sense they would have stopped that mad dog long ago. It is just too bad the German people must be dominated by a maniac who can't stand reasoning and just banks on his lies to bring him to power to rule the world.

T. B. S.
Washington, Sept. 12.

Not Inevitable

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I notice that the newspapers continually mention the war in Europe as the Second World War or World War II. It is not a World War. It is a European War.

The same old fatalistic bunk that was used to draw us into the World War lies in the idea that it is inevitable that America will be drawn into this European War.

If the idea is dinned into our ears continuously by the public press and by radio broadcast that this is not our war, that it is not inevitable that America will be drawn in, and that we are not going in, it will have a wholesome effect.

On Being Prepared

AS A YOUNG American under 30, with a college education, you want to put yourself in a position to be of the greatest use if the United States should have to go to war.

Also, you feel obliged to see that your family, which is used to a comfortable if not bountiful living, has more to live on than the $15 or $20 a month a private in the trenches can send home.

"Any time the United States should go to war," says one man in the family, "don't wait for the draft. Volunteer, and you'll get special training and a chance at a commission." He speaks from experience, but still you can't discover just how it works. You learn that the combat divisions of the reserve are closed to those without military schooling.

"Don't volunteer," says a friend. "If you do, you get hardly any training at all, and you get thrown right into the trenches. Drafted men get real training."

So you're back where you started.

Another friend has something really promising to suggest. "See somebody in Col. Z's office," he advises. "Tell him you want to apply for a commission in the Military Intelligence. You'll find them all ready to help you. If you can't get into public relations work in the intelligence reserve then maybe they'll find another spot you can apply for."

You prepare yourself for the encounter. You haven't the slightest idea what will be required of you, or what would be the proper method of approach. You haven't had any relatives who were officers in the Army since the Revolution, but you recall that your wife's uncle is a major in the regulars and her aunt's husband is a colonel. If there are references needed or there is wire-pulling to be done, as there is in every other walk of life you have experienced, they ought to serve.

You drive down to the Munitions Building. You find the office number of Military Intelligence on the wall directory. You attack the stairs. The office is quickly available. Inside are three women. Rather than ask for Col. X, you ask where you should apply for a commission in the organized reserves, Intelligence Division, and are directed to Maj. Y.

Down one flight of stairs you find the major's office. Instead of walking into an anteroom as before, you swing through the shutters directly into a more imposing office, where a youngish, gray-haired major is talking to a man with a brief case. You wait until the business is complete.

"I hope I'm not intruding, sir," you say. "I was directed here to apply for a commission in the organized reserves."

The major is surprised, but kind. "You should go back to the first floor, at the main entrance," he tells you. "There you'll find a big sign, showing you where to go . . . What say? Oh, yes. Well, son, they'll explain all that to you down there." You feel that you have been reproved, though with the utmost tact and kindness.

At the main entrance you confirm your recollection that the only big sign is a recruiting poster. So the fatherly young major evidently mistook your purpose.

The guard has returned to his desk.

"I'm new here," he says. "But there was a fellow just asked me the same question. He's finding out in that office over there. Let's see what he got."

It appears the Organized Reserves are on the third floor. You retrace your steps, and in a rear wing you find the correct office at last. A desk sergeant is advising a very young man from V. P. I. When that interview is concluded, he turns to you with a friendly and reassuring smile. You are grateful for his manner. It is not like anything else you have ever seen. It is not pitying or condescending like that of a business official to whom you apply for a job. It is not obsequious like that of a floor walker. It is direct, equal, co-operative and exact.

Sergt. K. learns that you have a college education and six years' newspaper experience.

"You are admirably fitted for M. I.," he says. "Unfortunately, that's closed. They aren't taking applications. Go down and see Maj. Z., in Ordnance."

Maj. Z. is just as friendly, informal and direct. When he finishes a discussion of target practice with an acquaintance he asks you:

"Military training?"

"No military training."

"Education?"

"College—B. A."

"What did you major in?"

"Fine arts."

"Can't qualify."

Maj. Z. is sympathetic, but he says your education and experience doesn't help you in Ordnance. He shows you the list of their activities.

Sergt. K. is genuinely sorry. He thought you could qualify in Ordnance.

You are about to leave.

"Give me your name and address," he calls. "If anything more than the limited emergency is declared, you'll be notified at once. Don't wait. Come to me at once, and I'll give you the necessary papers."

So that's that. If it comes to war, and you aren't forgetting it did last time, you guess you'll be in the trenches with the rest of them. You don't object, especially—except you wonder what your wife and children will do.

Fair Enough

Latent Commitment

NOW THAT the Americans know what the Monroe Doctrine lets them in for, they may want to affirm, trim or revoke it. Hitherto, to the present citizenship of the country, the doctrine has been pretty much of a wall motto, but in the clutch created by Hitler's World War it comes to mean that the United States guarantees Canada's territorial integrity against not only Hitler but Hitlerism, even though Canada is, in a legalistic sense, the aggressor, having declared war on an unoffending European ruler who was virtuously going about his patriotic duty of defending his people from the foul aggression of the bumptious Poles.

If President Roosevelt correctly interprets the doctrine in saying that the United States would not stand idly by if domination of Canadian soil is threatened, the United States, without being actively aware of the fact, has a commitment, not to Canada but to herself, to go to war on Canada's behalf in certain easily conceivable conditions.

Monroe Doctrine Is U. S. Tradition

THE DOCTRINE has been interpreted in the past to permit foreign powers to attack and defeat American nations and dependencies of other foreign nations on this hemisphere. The catch is that such foreign powers, having attacked and chastised an American land in redress of real or imaginary wrongs, must not extend its sovereignty or system of government. A realist would decide that the best way to prevent such extension would be to make sure that no European power—and, in the present instance, Germany—won such a fight on this hemisphere. The President seems to be a realist.

The Monroe Doctrine, there, obviously, is an important problem in the general question of neutrality, and, inasmuch as it has never been formally adopted by the Congress or approved by the people except in a passive way, it calls for definite understanding and positive decision now. It is not an enactment but a tradition, but the tradition is backed by numerous applications in specific cases and will be applied in the case of Canada or any other British possession in these parts unless the people now ask Congress to get off the limb. It does seem doubtful that the meaning of the doctrine in relation to Canada's war with Hitler ever was fully anticipated, and while the idea of an attack on Canada by Hitler may seem fantastic, the commitment is there, nevertheless.

Doctrine Never Adopted As Law

MOREOVER, an attack by Hitler on the least coral speck owned by Britain or France in the proscribed zone would call for the same action, nor is it worth arguing that, once committed to hostilities by such mischance, the United States could then escape complete participation on the side of the Allies.

Maybe that is what the American people understand and accept, but they never had a chance to express themselves on the subject, and the possibilities are too important for decision on the basis of a policy expressed in a much different state of the world more than 100 years ago in a Presidential message which never was adopted as law.

The neutrality fight arrays the pro-Ally element against the isolationists. There is no pro-German sentiment at all, and the efforts of the anti-American bund only inflame the pro-Ally feeling but fail to impress the isolationists one way or another.

The pro-Ally group argue that their kind of neutrality is the true neutrality, but they not only detest Hitler and want him licked and, if possible, killed but fear that if Britain were to fall this country would be next on the list and would be pushed around and finally drawn into a war, anyway.

Present Neutrality Is Blow At Allies

ATTACHMENT to Great Britain or the nglish is an important, if unrecognized, influence in this group of opinion. That kind of neutrality certainly is more warlike than the isolationist kind, and the sympathies inherent in it have been plainly shown in various speeches and little digs and in the detention of the Bremen.

The other neutrality, the existing kind, if affirmed, would be a terrible blow to the morale and the material resources of the Allies and might beat them. These people think the United States could get in shape to stand off any threat from a victorious Hitler and protect her interests in the Pacific and Latin America without any assistance from Europe. Detesting Hitlerism not less heartily than the President does, they think the United States takes in too much territory in joining or assisting the Allies.

So we just can't be neutral in fact. Whatever choice we make we help one side or the other, and whatever Congress may do about it the Monroe Doctrine, as it stands, will still oblige the Americans to come a-running the instant Hitler makes a pass at anything British or French anywhere on the American patrol.

Text of Lindbergh Neutrality Talk

Flier Urges U. S. to Stay Out of Quarrel, Save Civilization

The text of Col. Lindbergh's address follows:

In times of great emergency, men of the same belief must gather together for mutual council and action. If they fail to do this, all that they stand for will be lost. I speak tonight to those people in the United States of America who feel that the destiny of this country does not call for our involvement in European wars.

We must band together to prevent the loss of more American lives in these internal struggles of Europe. We must keep foreign propaganda from pushing our country blindly into another war. Modern war, with all its consequences, is too tragic and too devastating to be approached from anything but a purely American standpoint. We should never enter a war unless it is absolutely essential to the future welfare of our Nation.

This country was colonized by men and women from Europe. The hatreds, the persecutions, the intrigues they left behind gave them courage to cross the Atlantic Ocean to a new land. They preferred the wilderness and the Indians to the problems of Europe. They weighed the cost of freedom from those problems, and they paid the price. In this country, they eventually found a means of living peacefully together—the same nationalities that are fighting abroad today. The quarrels of Europe faded out from American life as generations passed. Instead of wars between the English, French and Germans, it became a struggle of the New World for freedom from the Old—a struggle for the right of America to find her own destiny. The colonization of this country grew from European troubles and our freedom sprang from European war, for we won independence from England while she was fightingFrance.

Washington Saw Danger

No one foresaw the danger ahead of us more clearly than George Washington. He solemnly warned the people of America against becoming entangled in European alliances. For over 100 years his advice was followed. We established the Monroe Doctrine for America. We let other nations fight among themselves. Then, in 1917, we entered a European war. This time we were on England's side, and so were France and Russia. Friends and enemies reverse as decades pass—as political doctrines rise and fall.

The great war ended before our full force had reached the field. We escaped with the loss of relatively few soldiers. We measured our dead in thousands. Europe measured hers in millions. Europe has not yet recovered from the effects of this war and she has already entered another. A generation has passed since the Armistice of 1918, but even in America we are still paying for our part in that victory—and we will continue to pay for another generation. European countries were both unable and unwilling to pay their debts to us.

Now that war has broken out again, we in America have a decision to make on which the destiny of our Nation depends. We must decide whether or not we intend to become forever involved in this age-old struggle between the nations of Europe. Let us not delude ourselves. If we enter the quarrels of Europe during war, we must stay in them in time of peace as well. It is madness to send our soldiers to be killed as we did in the last war if we turn the course of peace over to the greed, the fear, and the intrigue of European nations. We must either keep our of European wars entirely or stay in European affairs permanently.

Blames Victors of 1914

In making our decision, this point should be clear: These wars in Europe are not wars in which our civilization is defending itself against some Asiatic intruder. There is no Genghis Kahn or Xerxes marching against our Western nations. This is not a question of banding together to defend the white race against foreign invasion. This is simply one more of those age-old quarrels within our own family of nations—a quarrel arising from the errors of the last war—from the failure of the victors of that war to follow a consistent policy either of fairness or of force.

Arbitrary boundaries can only be maintained by strength of arms. The Treaty of Versailles either had to be revised as time passed, or England and France, to be successful, had to keep Germany weak by force. Neither policy was followed; Europe wavered back and forth between the two. As a result, another war has begun, a war which is likely to be far more prostrating than the last, a war which will again kill off the best youth of Europe, a war which may even lead to the end of our Western civilization.

We must not permit our sentiment, our pity, or our personal feelings of sympathy, to obscure the issue, to affect our children's lives. We must be as impersonal as a surgeon with his knife. If we take part successfully, we must throw the resources of our entire Nation into the conflict. Munitions alone will not be enough. We cannot count on victory merely by shipping abroad several thousand airplanes and cannon. We are likely to lose a million men, possibly several million—the best of American youth. We will be staggering under the burden of recovery during the rest of our lives. And our children will be fortunate if they see the end in their lives, even if, by some unlikely chance, we do not pass on another Polish Corridor to them. Democracy itself may not survive. If we enter fighting for democracy abroad, we may end by losing it at home.

"America Has Little to Gain"

America has little to gain by taking part in another European war. We must not be misguided by this propaganda to the effect that our frontiers lie in Europe. One need only glance at a map to see where our true frontiers lie. What more could we ask than the Atlantic Ocean on the east and the Pacific on the west? No, our interests in Europe need not be from the standpoint of defense. Our own natural frontiers are enough for that. If we extend them to the center of Europe, we might as well extend them around the earth. An ocean is a formidable barrier, even for modern aircraft.

Our safety does not lie in fighting European wars. It lies in our own internal strength, in the character of the American people and of American institutions. As long as we maintain an Army, a Navy, and an air force worthy of the name, as long as America does not decay within, we need fear no invasion of this country.

Again, I address those among you who agree with this stand. Our future and our children's future depends upon the action we take. It is essential to think clearly and to act quickly in the days which are to come. We will be deluged with propaganda, both foreign and domestic—some obvious, some insidious. Much of our news is already colored. Every incident and every accident will be seized upon to influence us. And in a modern war there are bound to be plenty of both. We must learn to look behind every article we read and every speech we hear. We must not only inquire about the writer and the speaker—about his personal interests and his nationality—but we must ask who owns and who influences the newspaper, the news picture, and the radio station. If our people know the truth, if they are fully and accurately informed, if they are not misled by propaganda, this country is not likely to enter the war now going on in Europe.

Challenge to America

And if Europe is again prostrated by war, as she has been so often in the past, then the greatest hope for our western civilization lies in America. By staying out of war ourselves, we may even bring peace to Europe more quickly. Let us look to our own defenses and to our own character. If we attend to them, we have no need to fear what happens elsewhere. If we do not attend to them, nothing can save us.

If war brings more Dark Ages to Europe, we can better preserve those things which we love and which we mourn the passing of in Europe today by preserving them here, by strengthening them here, rather than by hurling ourselves thoughtlessly to their defense over there and thus destroying all in the conflagration. The German genius for science and organization, the English genius for government and commerce, the French genius for living and the understanding of life—they must not go down here as well as on the other side. Here in America they can be blended to form the greatest genius of all.

The gift of civilized life must still be carried on. It is more important than the sympathies, the friendships, the desires, of any single generation. This is the test before America now. This is the challenge—to carry on western civilization.

surgeon with his knife," added the flier who also has won fame in scientific circles through his artificial-heart experiments with Dr. Alexis Carrel.

"America has little to gain by taking part in another European war," he declared. He warned further:

"If we enter the quarrels of Europe during the war, we must stay in them in time of peace as well.

"It is madness to send our soldiers to be killed as we did in the last war if we turn the course of peace over to the greed, the fear and the intrigue of European nations."

At the War Department, where Lindbergh has just concluded a tour of duty as a reserve officer, it was said officials had know nothing of his intention to make a speech until it was announced by the broadcasting companies.

Elsewhere it was said the address was the outgrowth of suggestions at a private dinner attended by Lindbergh some time ago.

After the address, Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh walked from the hotel to a nearby radio station to hear a transcription of his talk.

Before the broadcast, he talked to the radio technicians about how the portable apparatus operated.

While making the address, he leaned on the speaker's stand with both elbows, gripping his manuscript with both hands, glancing up only occasionally at the five microphones ranged in front of him.

Attorney Irvin Goldstein, former assistant district attorney: "Now as never before, responsible handling of the news from Europe is needed. I think The Post has done a public service in making the New York Times service available to Washington readers."

John Locher, president of the Central Labor Union of AFL locals in Washington: "I have confidence in the New York Times and I am glad to see its war service appear in a Washington paper."

Sidney R. Katz, executive secretary of the Industrial Union Council of local CIO unions: "The more sources of information a newspaper can present to its readers, the more chances its readers have of getting a true picture of what's really going on."

Norvelle Sharpe, of the President's Cup Regatta committee: "I think the New York Times war service is a wonderful thing, and I am delighted to see it appearing in The Washington Post."

Assistant District Attorney Wilson: "Doubtful and incomplete reporting often is inevitable in wartime. It is reassuring to find in a local newspaper dispatches which are as widely known for accuracy and dependability as those of the New York Times war service in The Post."

Richard A. Harman, attorney: "The addition of the New York Times war news service to The Post just caused me to spend considerable more time reading an already tremendously interesting newspaper. It appears to me that The Post's war coverage is now as complete as a newspaper can get."

A Common Sentiment

By Mark Sullivan

Pro-Allies Feeling

AS PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT asks Congress to change the neutrality law, there are conditions—that work against him. These conditions are not directly related to the merit of the changes Mr. Roosevelt asks. They are surrounding circumstances, details of the atmosphere in which the incident takes place. Some of these canditions Mr. Roosevelt might be able to modify.

Many think that Mr. Roosevelt is not neutral in his own mind. Indeed, the fact is he is not neutral. His official messages to Congress have recited his disapproval of the "philosophies of force." Against the philosophers of force he asked Congress to increase our armament, and Congress, almost unanimously, gave him the increase he asked. While Mr. Roosevelt never named Germany as one of the "philosophies of force," everybody understood Germany was included.

That Mr. Roosevelt is not neutral in his mind is no detriment to him in the eyes of Congress. Ver few members of Congress are neutral in mind. A common saying is that nine out of ten Americans want to see Britain and France prevail.

But, to many, it is difficult to distinguish between wanting Britain and France to prevail, and, on the other hand, wanting to keep America out of war.

Desire Allies To Win Without U. S. Help

YET THAT distinction exists. It exists in the minds of millions of Americans. The very same nine out of ten who wish the Allies to prevail, wish at the same time that the United States stay out of the war. Yet many who carry those two wishes separately in their own minds are uneasy as to whether Mr. Roosevelt carries them separately in his mind.

Mr. Roosevelt, as President, has the obligation of taking steps, about the Army and Navy and otherwise, looking to greater preparedness for war. Many who see him take steps for that purpose, and limited to that purpose, wonder uneasily—and probably quite wrongly—whether the steps Mr. Roosevelt takes are meant solely for preparedness for war, and not for participation in war.

The line is a fine one, but it exists inevitably in the minds of every head of state—such as Switzerland and Holland, for example—which arm for preparedness and for preservation of their own neutrality. About all Mr. Roosevelt can do about it is to take care, so far as he can, to make an impression of prudence and sure-footedness and caution and cool self-control. Unfortunately for what is desired in this situation, Mr. Roosevelt, throughout his years in the public eye, has made rather the opposite impression, the impression of being impetuous, dramatic, dashing, almost reckless. However much the impression of daring may have been useful to him in ordinary circumstances, it is a handicap to him now. Some of the votes in Congress that defeated Mr. Roosevelt's neutrality measure in July, came from members who were concerned about Mr. Roosevelt's traits of temperament. They liked, or did not object to, the neutrality measure Mr. Roosevelt asked for; but they were apprehensive about what such a measure might lead to under a person of Mr. Roosevelt's temperament.

Third-Term Statement Would Clear The Air

ONE WAY Mr. Roosevelt could disarm this feeling would be to give Congress and the country the spectacle of never acting on his own initiative alone, or always acting by agreement with others, of having about him at all times the leaders of both parties in Congress.

There is another handicap to Mr. Roosevelt. Everybody knows that persons close to him want to bring about a third term. That is as much as anybody knows surely, for Mr. Roosevelt himself has never indicated he wants a third term. But human nature being suspicious, there was suspicion that some of those about Mr. Roosevelt might be tempted to use the neutrality measure in such a way as to promote a third term. This handicap Mr. Roosevelt could remove readily. He could say that he is asking Congress and the country to adopt certain policies about neutrality, that he wants Congress to understand that these policies reflect his best wisdom and most disinterested judgment; and that to this end he hereby announces that under no circumstances will he seek or accept a third nomination.

Planned Economy Renewal Feared

THERE IS ANOTHER handicap. For nearly seven years, Mr. Roosevelt, and those about him, have sought to impose on America a system they call "planned economy." Planned economy means regimentation. By the close of Congress last month, planned economy was looked upon as a failure. Congress had stopped much of it and was ready to stop more at the next regular session.

In this condition came the war, and the steps to keep America neutral and prepared. These steps involve much of the very same regimentation which in peacetime has been called planned economy. The persons close to Mr. Roosevelt who promoted planned economy are still close to him. Some members of Congress, and many besides, wonder whether these persons are using the excuse of preparedness and neutrality as a way to refasten on the country that same regimentation which Congress had begun to get rid of.

Hare & Tortoise

By Barnet Nover

Two Weeks Of The War

THE EASTERN FRONT. So far the war in Europe gives the appearance of being a race between a hare and a tortoise, with the hare way out in front and no certainty that the ultimate result will be in line with Aesop's fable.

At the end of the second week of fighting in Poland, Warsaw was still in Polish hands, a battered, shell-scarred, half-destroyed witness to Poland's indomitable spirit. But almost everywhere else on the now confused and chaotic Eastern Front, the German juggernaut was making progress. Practically half of Poland, by far the richer half, is now in the hands of the enemy.

The strategy of the war in the east called for a strategic retreat by the Polish armies to the triangle bounded by the Vistula, Bug and San rivers, a region more easy to defend than is west Poland and possessing certain industries capable of supplying at least part of the needs of an army. There, with the front compact instead of being spread out, with the terrain more favorable to defense, with German lines extended and with autumnal rains making the going difficult for a mechanized army, it was expected that a more determined resistance could be made.

Unfortunately for such plans, the German drive during the past 14 days has been so rapid, the destruction meted out by the German air force on Polish concentrations so devastating and the thrusts of the onrushing Nazi steamroller so crushing that such a stand may prove impossible.

Once Lwow (the prewar Lemberg) is taken—so far the Poles insist they have repeatedly repulsed the invaders there—the German army would be in a position to turn the Polish flank. Yet that hasn't happened yet and the fighting in Poland is certainly not over.

THE WESTERN FRONT. Poland is bearing the brunt of the German onslaught and she is doing it with practically no direct aid from her Allies. But this week the Germans discovered that the war in the west is no token war which they can ignore or minimize.

In actual area taken the French showing is not impressive. Between 350 and 500 square miles of German territory wedged between the Maginot and Siegfried lines are in the hands of the Allies. Slowly and methodically, with what appears to be a desire to avoid heroics and to economize on manpower, the French have been pushing on. Anglo-French pressure on the Western Front has not in the slightest eased the German pressure in Poland. But the Allies feel they may be in for a long war in which the only victory that really counts is the last.

The British cabinet suggested as much when it quietly announced that Great Britain was preparing for a long war. And other British and French official statements—that which emerged from a meeting in France of the Supreme War Council attended by Premiers Chamberlain and Daladier, for instance—made it clear that no matter what happened in Poland the war would go on. Which means that the war will be won or lost in the west.

WAR AT SEA. In a long war a nation's prime essential is uninterrupted supplies of raw materials and foodstuffs capable of taking care of the need of both the armies in the field and the population behind the lines. In this particular all of the combatants are vulnerable.

Germany is vulnerable because despite Goering's four-year plan and ersatz products, the Reich is very far from self-sufficiency and may, if the war lasts anything like as long as did the last, be starved out no matter how much territory is conquered in the east. Great Britain is vulnerable because she must depend on the outside world for a large part of her needs. But her vulnerability is relative rather than absolute so long as she remains in control of the seas.

That is why the depredations of the submarine during the first two weeks of the war justifiably alarmed the Allies. And by the same token they could begin to breath a sigh of relief when active measures taken by the British admiralty began to cut down the incidence of U-boat destructiveness and carry the war to the enemy.

WAR IN THE AIR. It used to be argued that some day war would become so frightful that no nation would dare to embark on it. War is as frightful as anyone could possibly imagine. But wars go on. However, the failure of the Allies and Germany thus far to employ the full force of their air arms against each other shows that there is some point to the old argument. Germany has not hesitated to bomb Polish towns unmercifully and with tremendous loss of civilian life. The Poles are in no position to retaliate. The British and French are. If London and Paris are attacked by air, so will be Berlin and Cologne and Leipzig and Hamburg and Essen; and it is not unlikely, in view of the greater anti-aircraft preparations made by the Allies, that the damage to German cities would be greater than to British and French centers. So the Germans have held off waging the same kind of a blitzkrieg in the west that they have waged in the east. And the Allies, for their part, have sought to avoid the responsibility of having first indulged in aerial warfare on an extended scale. They are anxious to avoid offending neutral public opinion in view of the fact that so many nations are neutral and so many neutrals are uncertain of their continued neutrality.

THE NEUTRALS. Of Europe's great powers two are neutral—Italy and Russia. Both, however, are to an undetermined degree in the German camp. The Italian press, while no longer indulging in attacks on the French and the British, continue to have a kind word and more than a kind word for the Germans. According to at least one newspaper the Axis remains even though Italy is not fighting on Germany's side.

On the other hand statements made by the Soviet press suggest that Russia's neutrality may not very much longer be even nominal. There is, it appears, a very real possibility that Russia may join Germany in partitioning Poland, taking for her share the Ukrainian-inhabitated parts of Poland. The truth of that remains to be seen. But the rumblings out of Moscow, the extremely large concentration of Russian troops on the Polish and Rumanian borders, suggest ominous developments. At any rate, once the German armies have pushed to the Russian frontier a new situation will have arisen and one fraught with dangerous possibilities for the Allies.

President denied having made.

The President said yesterday that the presence of the United States naval and Coast Guard patrol 200 miles off the coast did not mean that the territorial waters reached to that point. The patrol ships were there only to get information, he added, to find out what is going on in waters on this side of the ocean.

Meanwhile, the pre-session debate on neutrality law revision gained greater voice as more members of Senate and House headed for Washington.

Denies U. S. Would Be Involved

Here, Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, replied to the Thursday night address in which Senator Borah (Republican) of Idaho, declared embargo repeal would involve this country, eventually, in the war in Europe.

"I am just as strongly in favor of neutrality and staying out of war as is Senator Borah," Thomas said. "It is not intervention to repeal the embargo."

Dispatches from numerous points, carried by the Associated Press, brought these other reaction and comments:

Senate Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky: "The neutrality law as it now is, I think anyone must admit, puts a penalty against those nations that have not spent their time manufacturing armaments and organizing an army, and it benefits those which did."

Senator Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota: "I am in favor of the present neutrality law because it was written in the light of the experience we had in the last war. The question is, have we learned a lesson from the last experience, so that we will keep out of this one?"

Rayburn for Repeal

House Majority Leader Rayburn, of Texas: "Is it wrong to sell arms to the oppressed Chinese or to the people of little countries where men and women are trying to protect their homes and all they have from the greedy hands of one who would take all at any consequences, and to satisfy his own selfish interests?"

Senator Bulow (Democrat), of South Dakota: "In my opinon, repeal of the arms embargo act will be the entering wedge to get us into the European scrap. Under the cash-and-carry policy the warring nations soon will run out of money, and then an effort will be made to repeal the Johnson act, which prohibits loans to nations which have repudiated their indebtedness to us. That will bring us into the same situation where we were 20 years ago."

Other neutrality developments yesterday included departure of Undersecretary of State Welles and other members of the United States delegation for the Panama City conference of the 21 American republics on problems raised by the war.

"The conference is being called because the general European war is a potential menace to the peace of this continent," Welles said before leaving New York. The consultations begin on September 23.

"This country will base its discussions on the lessons learned in the late war," Welles continued. "Each country will follow its own dictates." He expressed doubt that any of them would "co-operate" with any belligerent.

Sayre Gets "Final Instructions"

Francis B. Sayre, new American High Commissioner to the Philippines, received "final instructions" from President Roosevelt regarding neutrality as it pertains to the islands. Sayre will leave here today and is due at Manila October 16.

Mr. Roosevelt told his press conference that no plans had been considered for the Government here that could be remotely connected with the possibility of this country getting into the war.

He repeated views expressed Thursday by Secretary of State Hull that this country has abandoned none of its rights as a neutral under international law, though the neutrality act has curtailed the rights of Americans in dealing with belligerents.

Return Of The Corset

"Don't tell me you are going to wear that thing."

"Of course I am, Willis. What's wrong with it?"

"What's right with it?"

"Lissen, you worry about your clothes and I'll worry about mine."

"O. K. If you want to squeeze yourself into a mule harness it's your own affair, and I've got nothing more to say."

"Good!"

"But I thought you had more sense than to substitute armor for underwear just because other women were doing it."

"I'm not doing it because other women are doing it."

"Name one other reason."

"It improves my figure."

"Have I made any complaints?"

"And I have to wear a corset to make the new gowns fit."

"It's a racket. They make gowns so you have to have corsets to make 'em look right, and then they make corsets so you have to have 'em to make the gowns look right."

"The corset is nothing new. Our mothers wore 'em."

"Yeah. And our fathers wore cowhide boots and corduroy pants. I had a great-uncle who wore a powdered wig. So what?"

"Oh, Willis, pipe down! You'd think you were going to wear these corsets instead of me."

"No, I wouldn't. I've got sense."

"If you had sense you wouldn't try to tell a woman what to wear. Here, help me lace 'em up."

"Nothing doing. If the darned things killed you I could be held as an accessory."

"Corsets never killed anybody."

"That's too bad."

"Take the end of the strings and pull with all your might while I take a deep breath."

"This is a fine way to solve the unemployment problem."

"Pull hard. I've got to have help to get into 'em."

"Who gets you out?"

"Willis, you're not pulling hard."

"Yes, I am, but you're not inhaling."

"Now! . . . Harder!"

"How's that?"

"Better."

"Don't tell me my old man had to do this."

"Positively."

"Now I know it wasn't rheumatism."

"There, Willis! Doesn't it do something to me?"

"Yes, and it does something to the Florodora Sextette."

"What?"

"It makes it seem contemporary."

I don't know what he said,
But I will bet that Joseph's
Strong face grew ultra red.

What Adolf said to Joseph
There in the light so dim
I don't know, but I do know
What Joseph said to him.

Taxes Paid on Auto Double Its First Lot

The average automobile pays more than double its value in taxes during its normal life span, Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the District branch of the American Automobile Association, declared yesterday.

In the District the average car cost its owner $42.02 in taxes during 1938, Cleveland said. Automobiles, in proportion to their value, are taxed 23 times as heavily as rural real estate, he asserted, and 20 times as much as Class 1 railroads.

Representatives of 20 Denominations Found In Its Membership

Taking another step in its brief but interesting career, Beverley Hills, (Va.) Church—infant church in an infant community—has launched a nursery school for its prospective future members.

Rev. Mr. Basom

Twenty tots from 2 to 4 years old toddled in for opening sessions last Tuesday—just two days after the first anniversary celebration of the congregation, a mission of the Central Pennsylvania Conference of the Evangelical Church.

The school, which meets Monday through Friday, from 9 a. m. to noon, is an outgrowth of a kindergarten experiment of last year, discarded in favor of a more necessary project for the younger children, who are rapidly increasing in an area of young married couples.

Paid supervisers of the school, financed through a monthly tuition fee of $7, are Mrs. John R. Speck, of Takoma Park, and Mrs. Adelia Van Devanter.

Others behind the project are Mrs. Donald A. Russell, Mrs. Fred P. Frutchey, Mrs. Paul D. Watson and Mrs. W. B. Bauman, committeemen, and the Rev. William E. Basom, youthful minister.

Seated yesterday in his apartment over the church edifice, the Rev. Mr. Basom, who returned from his vacation last week with an attractive bride, explained that the idea of a church in Beverley Hills was first considered in 1937 by the Central Pennsylvania Conference, which assigned him and the Rev. George E. Schnabel, pastor of Albright Memorial Evangelical Church here, to survey the community.

Mrs. Basom

The conference as a result, provided a gift of $20,000 for construction of the building. Ground was broken on November 14, 1937; cornerstone laid May 15, 1938; first services held September 11 and formal dedication October 30, 1938.

It is hoped that men's and women's classes will develop from the adult discussion group, which meets Sunday nights to talk over such issues as neutrality, euthanasia—humanitarian deaths—peace, great beliefs of Christian scripture and other topics.

Leaders include Joseph P. Blumgren, Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Darling, Mrs. Claude McFarland and others.

Emphasizing the interdenominational spirit of the church, in which more than 20 denominations are represented, the pastor said that about 90 per cent of the residents of Beverley Hills have manifested interest in the activities.

The Ladies' Guild, organized last April 28, is one of his most dependable organizations, he said, with Mrs. P. R. Holler as chairman and Mrs. Frank Chedester and Mrs. M. B. Reynolds as aides. Formed May 5, the Men's Club is going strong under the leadership of Joseph Blumgren, John Wells and Fred Horton.

Other officers of the church are H. B. Darling, M. B. Reynolds and Charles McCombs, president, treasurer and secretary, respectively, of the board of trustees, of which Mrs. Ralph Hogan and Lloyd Skeel are members; the board of stewards, of which M. B. Reynolds is president-treasurer and George H. Wilson, recording steward, and Miss Mamy Thompson and Mrs. Hubert Moore members. Mrs. E. Barnes is director of the choir.

The church will continue its first anniversary celebration with a jubilee banquet September 22, and a climaxing service September 24.

The Rev. Mr. Basom, whose father is E. C. Basom, one of the conference leaders, was formerly assistant at Albright Church, and was married August 25 to the former Miss Alva Rush Nash, of Racine, Minn., daughter of a clergyman.

Serving as assistant to the Rev. Mr. Basom is 19-year-old Ralph Hogan, jr., student at Georgetown Foreign Service School. He is eager to return to China, where his parents were once "Y" workers, either in the diplomatic or ecclesiastical field.

Dr. Pierce to Speak At All Souls' on 'The Sunlit Path'

First Congregational to Mark 74th Anniversary Tomorrow

Lloyd C. Douglas' engagement as guest speaker for First Congregational Church's diamond jubilee observance recalls for many Washingtonians that he once served as pastor of Luther Place Memorial Church.

Douglas

Noted author of "Magnificent Obsession," "Green Light" and other works, Douglas led the Thomas Circle congregation from 1908 to 1911, later embracing the Congregational faith, he became pastor of the First Congregational Church, Ann Arbor, Mich., in 1921.

Now a California resident, he will deliver a series of lectures on "Adventures and Defenses" on October 3, 4 and 5 at First Congregational Church here, which tomorrow celebrates the seventy-fourth anniversary of its first meeting leading to the Congregation's organization. Celebrations are scheduled throughout the jubilee year.

Tomorrow's celebration, which will also have a patriotic emphasis because of the anniversary of the adoption of the United States Constitution, will have as a highlight an address by Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, the pastor, on "Holding the World Together." Choristers of the past and present will join in singing old favorites under the diection of Mrs. Ruby Smith Stahl.

The bishop's garden will be open from noon to 2 p. m.

Christian Science Text

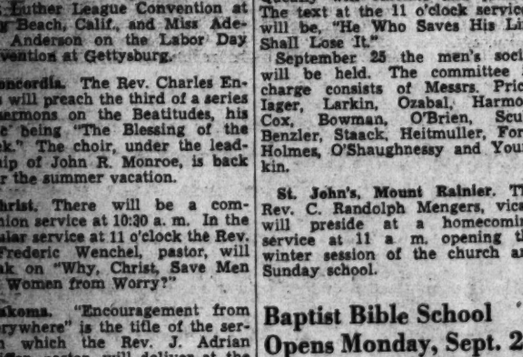
"Matter" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Sunday school is 11 a. m.

The Golden Text is from Psalms 73:26. "My flesh and my heart faileth: but God is the strength of my heart, and my portion forever."

Among citations for the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." (John 4:24).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "If we pray to God as a corporeal person, this will prevent us from relinquishing the human doubts and fears which attend such a belief, and so we cannot grasp the wonders wrought by incorporeal Love, to whom all things are possible." (Page 13).

Little Stories about GREAT HYMNS



"JESUS, LOVER OF MY SOUL"
"Rev. Charles Wesley
"Jesus, Lover of my soul,
Let me to Thy bosom fly
While the nearer waters roll,
While the tempest still is high!
Hide me, O my Saviour, hide,
Till the storm of life is past;
Safe into the haven guide,
O receive my Soul at last!"

"Rev. Charles Wesley, founder of Methodism, composed this hymn in 1739. It is considered the greatest hymn he ever wrote. He was born in England in 1707, and during his lifetime wrote more than 6,000 hymns. He died in 1788.

Boarding Schools Loom For Local Sub-Debs

Some Going to Connecticut and N. Y., But Many Will Be Right in Town, In Arlington or in Middleburg

IT WON'T BE LONG NOW before younger members of Capital society swap their summer shorts and gay gingham evening dresses for the tailored uniforms of boarding school. For the next few months they, who will be debutantes in a year or so, will spend most of their time listening to lectures instead of to swing.

Returning to Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn., is Miss Elaine Darlington, daughter of Mrs. George A. Garrett. This school, one of the most in demand by the families of future debs, is located in one of the loveliest small towns in the United States, and the large, rambling buildings are set on wide lawns which face an elm-shaded Main street. In recent years, Mr. and Mrs. Keep, beloved directors of the school, in an effort to offset the general impression that a finishing school is a place where students learn little besides pretty penmanship, have inaugurated junior college courses.

The life at Farmington is simple, the rules reasonably strict, and for diversion during week-day afternoons the girls stroll about the hilly streets or take tea in one of the local "approved" shoppes. Among Washington alumnae of Farmington are are Mrs. Frederick Brooke, Mrs. Jerauld Wright and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr.

AMONG THE "new girls" at Miss Porter's this year will be Miss Claire Snow, daughter of Mrs. Simms Snow. As soon as she gets her daughter settled, Mrs. Snow plans to go South for a visit of several weeks with her sister, Mrs. Edward Riddick of Memphis.

Off for the French School in New York early in October are a quartet of future debutantes—the Misses Louise Stillwell, daughter of Mme. Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador; Cynthia Dunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Sita Finkenstaedt, a former Farmington student, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, and Muriel Maddox, daughter of Capt. C. H. Maddox, who is now in Newport.

As its name implies, French is spoken continually at this school, except for 15 or 20 minutes after dinner. Students are taken on trips to museums every week and to hear the opera. The school is located in a building on Park avenue, and the students, more fortunate than those at stricter establishments, such as Miss Hall's, in Pittsfield, Mass., are allowed many week-ends off.

MISS DUNN went to Foxcroft last year, and Miss Stillwell attended Chatham Hall, in Virginia. Among Washington students at the latter school is Miss Peggy Houghteling, sub-debutante daughter of the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization James L. Houghteling, and Mrs. Houghteling. The Houghtelings will return today from a summer in Chicago, where they also have a home.

Washington parents who prefer to keep their children at home during the winter send them to one of the many schools in and about Washington. Holton Arms, Gunston Hall, and the Madeira School are among the favorites.

The latter school is located in Virginia, on the banks of the Potomac, so that the students are exposed to country life as well as to learning. Classes last until early afternoon, when the students flock to chapel and then to lunch. The day scholars remain for sports in the afternoon, until about 4:30, when they are brought back to Washington by bus.

AMONG THE FUTURE debs now enrolled at the Madeira School are Miss Barbara Beale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Beale; Miss Anne Bryan, whose father, Comdr. Hamilton Bryan, is now with the fleet on the West Coast; Miss Edith Huntington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Chapin Huntington, and Miss Lucy Marbury, daughter of Dr. William Marbury.

Foxcroft, in nearby Middleburg, is selected the choice of the parents of a great many Washington girls. Miss Laura Blair, daughter of Mrs. Gist Blair, is at Foxcroft, where the girls spend almost as much time on horseback as they do over their books.

Other local young ladies who have already left for college or who will depart shortly are Miss Louise McNutt, who is at Indiana University; Miss Mary Jackson, daughter of Solicitor General and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson—she will attend Smith; Miss Jean Wallace, whose parents, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, recently installed her at Connecticut College; Miss Marianna Evans, who will leave soon for Ward Belmont College, and Miss Mary Mink, debutante daughter of Mrs. Owen J. Mink, who will be off a week from Monday for her sophomore year at Smith. Her sister, Miss Margaret Mink, will remain in Washington to attend the National Art School.

Holidays Nearly Over for These Debs

Underwood & Underwood.

Miss Mary Tudor Morsell (left) and her sister, Suzanne, will resume their studies shortly, the former at the Ogontz School, and the other at Mount Vernon Seminary. Daughters of Mr. and Mrs. H. Tudor Morsell, they will be presented to society by their parents at a party during the Christmas holidays

The Martins Will Fly to Panama Parley

Brazil's Envoy, Wife To 'Catch Up' With Aides Already Gone

The Brazilian Ambassador and Senora de Martins are planning to "catch up" later with the group of officials who have left to attend the Pan-American Conference which begins on Thursday in Panama City. The envoy will meet his wife, who returns on Monday from a stay in her homeland, and they will board a plane for Panama.

Senhora de Martins is accompanied on her trip back to the United States by Senhora de Gouthier, wife of the Second Secretary of the embassy. Senhora de Gouthier has already left for the conference.

The American delegation, headed by the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles, sailed yesterday from New York on the Santa Clara. Others who are en route include the Bolivian Minister, Dr. Luis Guachalla; Dr. Leo S. Rowe, Director General of the Pan-American Union; Dr. William Manger, counselor of the Union; Warren Juan Chavez, commercial attache of the Peruvian embassy, William Sanwers of the Chilean embassy, Mr. and Mrs. Hobart Montee, Thomas Stkoes and Thomas D. McEvoy.

Edwin Wilson, Minister to Uruguay, Paul C. Daniels, second secretary of the American embassy at Rio de Janeiro, Dr. Herbert Feis, economic adviser to the State Department, Dr. Warren Kelchner, acting chief of the Division of International Conferences of the State Department, Sheldon Thomas, press director, and his bride of a few weeks, are others who are en route to the conference.

Sayres to Depart Today for New Philippine Post

The newly appointed High Commissioner of the Philippines and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre will leave today for San Francisco, where they will sail for Manila.

Although they had planned to sail on September 22, the ship has been delayed for several days and they will spend that time in Pebble Beach, Calif. Mrs. Sayre's two sons, Ralph Graves, jr., and William P. Evans, are with them. Mr. Sayre's sons, Francis B. Sayre, jr., and Woodrow Wilson Sayre, will stay behind to resume their college studies.

Sailing with the Sayres will be the new High Commissioner's executive assistant, Woodbury Willoughby and Mrs. Willoughby.

C., who has chosen September 30 as the date of her wedding to Dr. Malcolm Douglas Harrison, son of Mr. and Mrs. Judson O. Harrison, sr., of this city. The ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock at the Metropolitan Methodist Church, and the couple will make their home at 4540 Forty-ninth street in Washington

Mrs. Woodring Will Give Tea

Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War, who will return to Washington about September 20, has issued invitations for a tea in her apartment at the Shoreham Hotel on Friday, September 22, at 4:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Woodring is chairman of the residential committee of the annual Red Cross Roll Call. Guests at the reception will be the members of her committee. At present Mrs. Woodring is with her parents, former Senator and Mrs. Marcus Coolidge, at Fitchburg, Mass. With her there are their three children, Melissa, Marcus and Cooper Coolidge Woodring. The children will not accompany Mrs. Woodring to town next week but will remain in Fitchburg until sometime in October.

Escalantes Fete Visitors From Home

Former Venezuelan Cabinet Member and Editor Attend Tea

The Ambassador of Venezuela, Dr. Diogenes Escalante, and his daughter, Senorita Maria Teresa Escalante, entertained at tea yesterday afternoon in their apartment at the Wardman Park for several distinguished visitors to the United States from their homeland.

The guests included Dr. Enrique Tejera, former minister of national education; Dr. Luis T. Nunez, editor of El Universal, the leading daily of Caracas, and Senora Nunez; Senora Luisa Mata, widow of the famous Venezuelan poet, Andres Mata, and her son; Senora Isava Nunez and Senorita Isava Nunez, Dr. Trino Ramirez, and Diego Nucete Sardi, former director in the treasury department of Venezuela.

Senora de Escalante has gone by plane to Venezuela, where she will remain until November.

Van Vlecks Back From Alaska

The Dean of George Washington Law School and Mrs. William C. VanVleck have returned to their home in Harrison street after a summer spent in travel to the West Coast and Alaska.

Following the meeting of the American Bar Association which Dean VanVleck attended in San Francisco in June, he and Mrs. VanVleck cruised to Alaska.

On the way out and on his return from the West Coast the dean met with alumni groups at various points. He spoke at meetings of the George Washington University Alumni Clubs in Chicago, Kansas City, Denver, Salt Lake City, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle and Omaha.

Daughter Born To Washburns

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Washburn, jr., have announced the birth of a daughter, Nancy Langhorne, in New York on Wednesday.

Mrs. Washburne is the former Nina Phillips. She is a daughter of the late John Phillips and Mrs. Phillips, of Boston, and a niece of William Phillips, American Ambassador to Italy.

Mr. Washburn is the grandson of the late Senator William Drew Washburn and a nephew of Mrs. Powell Clayton, Mrs. Hamilton Wright and Marshall Langhorne, of Washington.

Mexican Staff Holds Fiesta

In celebration of their national independence, the anniversary of which is today, members of the Mexican Embassy gathered last night at the embassy for an informal fiesta.

Acting as host in the absence of the Ambassador was the Charge d'Affaires, Dr. Don Luis Quintanilla, who with his wife, returned several days ago from an extended stay in Mexico City.

The Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera are reported to be leaving by motor from Mexico City for Washington sometime tomorrow.

The Najera "caravan" consists of two cars which barely take care of children, dogs, luggage, etc. Arriving with the Ambassador will be their daughter, Erma, and their three sons, "Memo," Luis and Francisco. Completing the party are the Najeras' enormous great dane and tiny chihuahua, the pets which the boys refuse to travel without.

Houghtelings Return From Chicago Today

The Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, James Lawrence Houghteling, and Mrs. Houghteling, will arrive in Washington today to reopen their home on Wyoming avenue.

Leaving here June 29, Mr. and Mrs. Houghteling have remained at their residence in Chicago all summer.

Mrs. J. J. Shugrue And Her Daughter Patsy Return

Mrs. John J. Shugrue, wife of Dr. Shugrue, and their daughter, Miss Patsy Shugrue, have returned from a trip to Mexico City and Havanna, Cuba.

Mrs. Shugrue's brother-in-law and sister, Dr. and Mrs. S. P. Burke and their three children will leave next week for New York, where they will spend the winter. Dr. Burke is to be on the faculty of Columbia University, and he and his family have taken an apartment on Riverside Drive at One Hundred and Sixteenth street.

Mrs. Abner Drury, a sister of Mrs. Burke and Mrs. Shugrue, recently returned from a trip to the West Coast, where she visited friends in Hollywood and San Francisco.

Jamieson Art Work Exhibited

Art lovers in Washington society will find plenty to interest them this season. That, at least, seems to be the indication now, with the paintings of Mexico by Mitchell Jamieson now on exhibition at the Whyte Gallery at 1707 H street, and Peter Hamilton's show opening tomorrow at the Chalet Nonpareil Art Gallery at 7103 Old Georgetown road.

Thirty-three canvases and a portfolio of prints are included in the Jamieson exhibition, which will continue until September 30. The gallery is open week days from 11 a. m. until 6 p. m., and admission is free.

Original wood-block prints and objects of oriental art from Mr. Hamilton's private collection are to be featured at the Chalet Nonpareil this afternoon from 4 to 7 p. m. Mr. Hamilton will talk informally on the artists represented in his collection. All persons interested in art are invited.

Luncheon to Honor Catherine Dargan

Miss Alice Meenehan and Mrs. Edward Johnson will entertain at a luncheon and shower today in the Colonial Room of the Wardman Park Hotel in honor of Miss Catherine Dargan, who will be married October 7 to Dr. Z. Bernard Lloyd.

The guests will include Miss Catherine Lloyd, the bridegroom's sister; Mrs. Robert Garner, Miss Margaret Sullivan, Mrs. Morris Lanman, Mrs. Melroy Ford, Mrs. Robert Quigley, Miss Mae Wade, Mrs. Joseph Marceron, Mrs. Nicholas Auth, Miss Elizabeth Conlon and Miss Mary O'Connor.

Notables Help Open Shar-Zad

Washington society had its second night-club opening of the week (the Mayflower was the first) last night when the Shar-Zad, Carlton Hotel supper club, launched its 1939-40 season.

Miss Ruth Overton, daughter of Senator and Mrs. John H. Overton and queen of this year's regatta, was present, and others who occupied floor-side tables included William Briggs and Miss Regina McKeever, Noel Bride, Paul Godehn, of Chicago, who entertained a party; Miss Anne Gillis, Duncan Campbell, John Kilbourne, of New York; Sydney Alvarez, who was host to several friends, and Miss Nan Furness.

All present hoped that Madeleine Carroll and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who are stopping at the hotel, would look in to view the festivities.

Wheeler, Hagner Making Air Trip to South America

Taking off today, George Wheeler and Randall Hagner, jr., are making a trip to South America by plane. Before the two boys, whose plans for a European jaunt were knocked sky high with the advent of the war, return, they will have covered some 20,000 miles by air.

They plan to go down one coast and up the other, taking in the Argentine, Brazil, Chile, Peru and other South American countries. Mexico will be their last stop before returning to the Capital from a six-week trip.

Ruth Overton Will Entertain

Miss Ruth Overton, daughter of Senator and Mrs. John H. Overton will entertain at a luncheon today at Wardman Park Hotel. Guests will be the six ladies-in-waiting to Miss Overton who will be crowned Queen of the Regatta on September 22.

Among those present will be Miss Ruth Quinn, Miss Martha Wilson, Miss Cuyler Schwartz, Miss Caroline Wadden, Miss Rose Berkshire and Miss Mary Putnam.

Robert McClintock Here On Way to New Post

Mr. and Mrs. Robert McClintock are at the Mayflower prior to leaving for New York, where they will stay at the Savoy-Plaza.

Mr. McClintock, retired third secretary of the United States embassy in the Dominican Republic, will sail shortly for Helsinki, Finland, to take up his duties in the legation there. Mrs. McClintock will remain in this country, because of the war, and will divide her time between New York and Washington.

Maj. Sepulveda and Wife Here From Philippines

Maj. and Mrs. Harry B. Sepulveda and their son, Ned, are spending a week at Wardman Park Hotel where they are at home to their many friends here.

Maj. Sepulveda has just returned from a tour of duty in Manila, P. I., and is en route to Langley Field, Va., where he will be adjutant with the Second Wing.

Betty Swaggart Gives Luncheon

Miss Betty Swaggart entertained at luncheon yesterday in the Mayflower Lounge for a group of friends who will shortly leave town to start school again.

In the company were the Misses Carol Cromlin, Patsy Kelsey, Patricia Hill, Jean Rountree, Gloria Goode, Janet Hartz and Mary Richards.

The Hunt Country

R. K. Mellon to Have 2 Horses in Chase at DuPont Estate Today

RICHARD K. MELLON, of Pittsburgh, will have two horses running today in the Foxcatcher National Cup Steeplechase to be held today over the estate of William duPont, jr., at Fair Hill, Md. Mr. Mellon's Yale blue and scarlet silks will be carried by The Stag II, who seems the best bet to beat the 14 starters, and Tool Zox, both well known horses over the jumps and trained by Jim Ryan.

Also in the line-up will be Mrs. Dodge Sloane's National Anthem and Walter Jefford's Warspite. It is expected that amateur Jockey Johnny Harrison will ride the latter horse and as Johnny has won the steeplechase for the last two years, he will be watched with interest today.

OTHER HORSES entered in the big event are C. Mahlon Kline's Our Sailor and Whaddon Chase; J. Brooks Parker's Court Time, Alvin T. Untermyer's Wambaw, Mrs. C. G. Vest's Trojan Racket, Louis Stoddard, jr.'s Blackcock, Harold E. Talbott's Big Rebel, J. E. Ryan's Another Boy, F. Ambrose Clark's Torturer and Emile Pfizer's Farndale.

When the special train Judiciary leaves Union Station at 11 o'clock this morning there will be many aboard from the hunt country. They will get off at Elkton, Md., where they will be met by automobiles and taken out to the race course. Among the 135 boxholders who will entertain guests are Mr. and Mrs. Amory Carhart, Mr. and Mrs. George Cutting, of Warrenton; Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Harper, of The Plains; Mr. and Mrs. William C. Langley, of Rectortown; Mr. and Mrs. G. Gordon Massey, of Eastern, Md.; Samuel D. Riddle, Peter Fischer, Mr. and Mrs. Dean Bedford, Isaac Clothier, jr., John Bowditch, S. Bryce Wing, Mr. and Mrs. Simpson Dean, Wallace W. Lanahan, Frank M. Gould, W. Plunket Stewart, Oliver D. Filley, Donald P. Ross, Mrs. Victor du Pont, Mrs. Charles L. Patterson, A. B. Echols, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mellon, Louis E. Stoddard, jr., and W. Newbold Ely, jr.

THERE WILL BE three other excellent races besides the main one. Post time for the first race is 2:45 (Eastern standard time). The opening number will be the Fair Hill Steeplechase, 2 miles over the small brush course. This race has 22 entries and should be a thrilling event. The Big Elk, a mile and seven furlong turf race, is next on the card, with 14 in the line-up. The National Cup Steeplechase is third on the card, and the Lewisville, a seven furlong jaunt over turf, is last.

Racing Secretary Edward Brennan rates Mrs. Brooks Bromley's Shot Gun as the best of the 20 named, as he has assigned the top-weight of 162 pounds to this son of Teddy. Next in weight assignment is Mrs. Marion Mackenzie's Monks Shadow, with 157 pounds.

Orange House Show Continues Today With Entry List of 500

The other weights scale down to 133 pounds which will be carried by Mrs. Marion du Pont's Montpelier three-year-olds. Navy and Calk Off.

A running description of the steeplechase will be carried over the airwaves of the Mutual Broadcasting System on a coast-to-coast hook-up between 3:30 and 4 (Eastern standard time). The well known turf commentator, Cris Wood, Jr., will be at the microphone.

THE HORSE SHOW at Orange, Va., continues today after a most successful opening yesterday. The 500 entries represent many of the best Virginia stables, among the owners being Dr. Lewis N. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. George Greenhalgh's Springsbury Stable; Mrs. Dorothy N. Lee, North Fletcher, Alex Calvert, Mrs. Fay Ingalls, Mrs. K. M. Bruce, H. H. Butz, Brandy Rock Farm, W. B. Bogert, Manley W. Carter, Dunnottar Pony Farm, Dodsborg Farm, Fox Hollow Farm, Robert W. Daniel, Edgewood Farm, Mrs. T. Kenneth Ellis, Meander Farm, North Hill Farm, W. Haggin Perry and Mrs. Marion du Pont Scott. James Maloney, of Piping Rock, and Thomas Baker, jr., of Derby, N. Y., are judging hunters, and R. H. Hutchison, jr., Laurel, Md., and J. Fred Hughes, jr., of Chevy Chase, Md., are scoring jumpers.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—It is a trifle late, but this piece wishes a happy fifty-first birthday to that fine example of Boston Irishman, Mr. Joe Kennedy, our Ambassador to the Court of St. James. He surely needs all our good wishes, for his job at present is an extraordinarily tough one, and so is that of his pretty wife, with their nine good-looking kids, or "The Kennedy Wildcats," Britain's leading baseball team . . .

Of course, we have our little woes, right here at home. Take Cora Johnson, of our town. She had brought up from babyhood a beautiful Boston bulldog—the pet of the Johnson household. Imagine her agony and surprise when, only the other day, this canine paragon, leaped up, fastened his fangs in the throat of his beloved mistress and nearly did her in.

AND THEN we of the overprivileged have our sufferings, too. Take the case of Muriel Vanderbilt Phelps, a name not unknown to the perusers of the daily newspapers. At Carmel, Calif., one of the Nation's choicest spots, a mean man with a revolver came at her headlong, took her money and her jewels, and hastily departed. The sheriff, to date, has not apprehended the miscreant. Perhaps it is not an unmitigated privilege to be born a Vanderbilt. At least, few of the rest of us have armed gentlemen remove first our valuables, and then themselves. . . .

One of the most terrifying things that can happen is a blaze in a movie theater. We had one the other day—and any such is a hair-raiser, but 200 customers galloped out of the place without a single one being hurt—a remarkable record.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Grimly Determined to Be Social Success, Girl Tells Her Story for 'Young Man's' Benefit

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In your answer to "Young Man," you were, as usual, beautifully correct and in absolute harmony with my opinion. I am writing because, although I am still 'teen age, I found myself a few years ago (two, to be exact) in the same unhappy position now occupied by this boy. I had spent my high school days in a convent school and had backtracked into the sort of girl whom parents worship and youngsters abhor.

I was excellent in my scholastic work and diligent about "keeping up" my reading. I read everything and gradually found myself living more and more in books, until I avoided real life situations in order to live in dreams. When I started to college I noticed for the first time that people my own age had a great many good times.

Then I did what "Young Man" has failed to do. I admitted that I wanted to enjoy myself with them, and that books and the "finer things of life" do not compensate for lack of companionship. I decided, as he must decide, that if I were to meet a pleasant young man with whom to spend the remainder of my life, I must first meet young men—in the plural!

I, too, was pompous about smoking, drinking and "necking." But I wanted young life while I was still young. So, in a very self-conscious way, I set about revising and modernizing my attitude. I began by getting to know some girls my own age; by listening to their chatter—taking lessons, as it were. Being intelligent and apt, I soon was a "young sounding" person, with a style all my own. The next step was to meet a boy. At 17, I had never had a date!

Without my family's knowledge, I entered into a "pick-up" acquaintanceship with a fellow who was, as you might expect, a young chap of no background, with a shady past. Again self-consciously, I told him the purpose I had in mind in making friends with him, and suggested we swap information. He helped me to talk to other fellows and I tried to educate him. We began to care immensely for each other, since we were constant companions, in spite of the huge difference in our class levels.

There you have it; I taught myself to smoke and chatter with the help of girls; and I was taught to act correctly with fellows by a man who had entirely too much experience . . . If "Young Man" really wants to come out of it and he should (although I gathered from his letter that he seems rather undecided about it) he must go to work making himself into the kind of person who can mingle and be accepted by whatever circles he may wish to enter.

He can't expect young men and young women to fall under his spell. They probably see him as a self-satisfied ass, and he should take a look at himself through their glasses. It will be a dismaying spectacle, and I am one who knows! It hurts to realize that, while you can get an A in trigonometry, you can't get a date for a football game and dance.

I decided what I wanted: to be young, happy and good looking while there was still time. And while I have cried myself to sleep many nights, I am almost there. My goal is in sight and my joy is indescribable. By the way, I have never learned to dance; I am still too self-conscious and scared for that; but I haven't given up. After all, my limbs are sound and I have the will to learn, and that is all that is necessary. Good luck and endless perseverance to "Young Man." Sincerely,

UNDAUNTED GIRL.

An Artless Confession, Inviting a Warning

DEAR U. G.: In the illustrated lessons we were taught in the church school classes of my childhood, there was one picture which captured my imagination and lingers with me still. It was the picture of an eager-faced child, rushing in headlong pursuit of something—a butterfly, perhaps: although that detail eludes me now—which seemed infinitely desirable to childish eyes. Heedless of danger, the child was pressing forward over the very edge of a precipice. But just behind the child's shoulder stood his Guardian Angel, reaching out a strong, instantaneously restraining hand.

As I read that portion of your letter telling of a "pick-up" acquaintanceship with a "young chap of no background and a shady past," this picture flashed vividly before my mind. I experienced the hope that your Guardian Angel (in a symbolical sense) is at your elbow, extending an equally ready hand to save you from the unknown dangers you are so artlessly courting.

It is contrary to common sense (as your own intelligence should have told you) to suppose that a man of the type described—no background, shady past, too much experience on the wrong side of the street, lacking elementary education—could assist you in acquiring the experimental social knowledge you need in order to play a charming role in civilized circles.

True, he may help you to break the mold into which your convent schooling has cast you, but there is every likelihood that, in reshaping your personality according to his concept of sophisticated womanhood, he will encourage you to become his feminine prototype—a "too free" woman, whose discriminating faculties have been dulled, rather than heightened.

Your admission that you have "begun to care immensely" for him, "in spite of the huge difference in class levels," (meaning, of course, in spite of the difference in your respective backgrounds)—this admission is disturbing in its implications. One recalls the lines from Tennyson's "Locksley Hall," to wit: "Yet it shall be: thou shalt lower to his level day by day, what is fine within thee growing coarse to sympathize with clay."

Your willingness to employ dubious means in order to attain a desirable end is charged with dynamite. Desperate expedients sometimes betray their practitioners, throwing them hopelessly off their course—just as you are now in danger of losing your way, through becoming seriously infatuated with your unwisely chosen teacher and "constant companion."

I appreciate the generosity of your desire to help "Young Man" achieve that social acceptance which his lonely heart craves, and I admire the courage and self-sufficiency with which you have sought to solve your similar problem. But I cannot indorse your technique in toto, since it skirts too near the edge of perilous precipices. Perhaps I owe you an apology for making your artless confession the occasion for comment that was not invited and certainly not anticipated. And yet, I would charge myself with failure to meet the obligation which your confidence has imposed, if I were to let you plunge blithely ahead, without remarking the dangers with which you are flirting.

The Newest Campus Whim

The college girl as usual must have her fling and this fall it seems to be manifesting in the socks she wears. Here is the type of costume she'll be displaying on the campuses of the East starting this month. Her flaming-red jersey she'll wear tucked in or out of her gray-flannel skirt. In flight of fancy she'll don the sturdy white knit socks which come just up to her knee cap and are brightened by embroidered flower sprays

Turkey, Sherry Chiffon Pie, Says Commissioner Craven

Favorite foods of Washington men are presented in this column.

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

THE RECORD for the longest radio tour by a radio officer is held by Tunis Augustus MacDonough Craven, better known as "Tam" Commander Craven carried on the tradition of his family, for since the beginning of the United States Navy, someone by the name of Craven has been in its ranks. His great grandfather with the same distinguished name, went down with his ship in the Battle of Mobile Bay in 1864, at the time that Admiral Farragut captured the Confederate fleet and took the forts guarding the entrance to Mobile.

Mr. Craven

During the World War, Commander Craven was in charge of all radio communications between this country and Europe and between shore and vessels at sea. He has been identified with virtually every movement for the introduction of modern engineering practices in broadcasting. In August, 1937, President Roosevelt appointed Mr. Craven a member of the Federal Communication Commission where he had served as chief engineer since 1935.

"What do I like to eat? Well, I don't like parsnips," Commissioner Craven told me.

That is not news, for parsnips are one of the least used of the root crops, although when properly prepared they get some people's vote. But he does like vegetables—potatoes, peas, and even the unpopular turnip.

Turkey, roast beef, lamb and ham are his favorites among meats. And he has a sweet tooth, for he likes pies, cakes and puddings. Sherry chiffon pie is a dessert that he likes exceedingly well. This is excellent pie taste, and here's how to make the delicious dessert.

Sherry Chiffon Pie

Prepare, bake and cool a pastry shell. Soak 1 tablespoon gelatin in 1-3 cup cold water for 5 minutes. Separate four eggs and beat the yolks with ½ cup of sugar until light. Add 2-3 cup sherry wine. Cook in a double boiler, stirring constantly until the mixture is the consistancy of a custard. Stir in gelatin and cool. Beat egg whites stiff and add ½ cup sugar and salt. Combine with custard. Pour into pastry shell. Chill in refrigerator until firm, allowing 2 to 3 hours. When ready to serve, cover with sweetened whipped cream. This pie is best served as soon as possible after it is firm.

Mother Devises Baby-Walker

How to teach a baby to walk with the minimum amount of effort has ever been a perplexing problem to mothers. So concerned was one Washington mother that she set about devising some means of easing the strain on both mother and child.

Finally, she conceived the idea of a staff controlled walker. She kept experimenting until she had perfected it. It worked so well for her private use, that soon friends asked her to make one for them. Made of soft leather the walker consists of two chest straps, two shoulder straps and a detachable handle. About the size of a small riding crop, the handle permits the mother to walk erectly and at the same time balances the baby without straining his arms. Indorsed by leading doctors, this new type baby walker is now on sale at several local department stores.

I.
Why do they drag me to the light,
To prove their dresses are not drab,
When all my waking hours are spent
In corners dark as an engine cab?

II.
Why do they smirkingly insist,
That I look so marvelous in grape,
Yet admit when I don the higher-priced blue,
It really does more for my face and shape?

III.
Why do they urge me to buy a hat,
That makes me look like a chimpanzee,
Just because it's a copy of one they saw
That came on the last trip of the Normandie?

Every Man's Credo

That all women are judging the war situation wholly from sentiment and emotions, while most men, including himself, are looking at it wholly objectively.

That women soldiers would not be able to stand up over 45 minutes on any front-line trench—if they ever got there.

That all the new feminine hats would look a lot better if they didn't have those fish nets and other things hanging down in the back.

That the dresses this fall are short wholly because women like to show their legs.

That most women are undernourished because they are afraid of getting fat.

That nobody ever notices fat in a man, and that a little fullness just under the belt is perfectly natural if he is past 25.

That in spite of all the artifices of the beauty shop, no woman has ever fooled him about her age, and that with one look at her he can guess her years to within six months—or at least a year.

That while he may not know just what a woman has on, he has 100 per cent perfect taste in judging her degree of smartness.

That few if any of his women friends ever wear the right hats and that they would make better selections if they took him along when they bought millinery.

That all the women in his office spend three-fourths of their time puttering around with unnecessary detail.

That you can get more and better food at places where you sit on a stool at a counter.

That one Scotch too many at a party has never impaired his ability to drive the car home safely.

That while he is bitterly opposed to Nazis and Fascists, he really thinks they have a few sound ideas about women.

Your Figure, Madame!

IT TOOK kinesiology, the science behind exercise, to expose some of the favorite old-time exercises as inefficient. For years, one of the standbys was the exercise in which you lie on the back on the floor and slowly raise the legs. That's supposed to flatten the tummy.

What it does is strain the back. In fact, raising the legs together, using the psoas and iliacus muscles, may give you a bigger stomach. You can skip that one. It's too great a strain and there are other exercises more worthwhile.

The position which involves the least strain is to lie on the back, knees flexed, soles of the feet on the floor. Very heavy people should take all abdominal exercise in this position. Anyone who is considerably above normal weight should take all exercise from a lying down position, rather than standing.

Once you are lying on the back with the knees flexed, feet on the floor, it is possible to work into a number of good exercises. The simplest one is merely to pull up and in with the lower abdominal muscles—hold, but do not hold your breath! Slowly release and repeat 10 times. This does two things: It strengthens the abdominal muscles and helps to correct sway back.

All abdominal exercises should be progressive, working from very simple movements into strongly contractile ones. The second exercise, starting from the same position, is to touch alternate knees to the chest.

The best exercises for strengthening the abdominal girdle and streamlining the midsection are done from one of the positions described.

Italy Expected To Restrict Food Further

Added Bars to Industry Also Forecast; Act To Thwart Hoarding

By Herbert L. Matthews

Copyright by New York Times.

Rome, Sept. 15.—A series of food and industrial restrictions in Italy were forecast today by the publication of a communique stating that there have been five interministerial meetings this past week to discuss the country's needs for the next 12 months.

Il Duce also ordered all prefects today to constitute special squads of agents to guard against food hoarding.

Arrests of shopkeepers for hoarding or for excessive prices, likewise is reported in today's press.

Italy already has some restrictions, particularly against the eating of meat on Thursdays and Fridays, and a coffee ban. Moreover in trying to discourage hoarding, local authorities are adopting measures which amount to the rationing of certain products. Such measures will surely be increased, for Italy is not self-supporting and importation will not only be difficult but costly due to the increased insurance rates.

Fuel Oil Needed

Fortunately, the wheat crop was large enough so that bread will not be lacking until the next harvest and there is a large variety of fruit and vegetables all the year round, so there may be hardships but there will not be any starvation even if Italy enters the war.

The knottiest problem is how to get sufficient fuel and lubricants, which are almost wholly imported. Gasoline is already restricted and the price has been raised, while today crude oil prices were increased. Distribution of gas for domestic use is limited to seven hours daily, while the use of coal also is being reduced.

Italy has been getting most of her coal from Germany and England, but both of these belligerents may soon be needing their entire productions.

Delegates to Leave

One unhappy episode of Axis politics ends tomorrow when the ill-fated Japanese military, naval and financial missions embark on the S. S. Hanoke at Naples for home. They left Japan to bring their country closer to the Axis, but their diplomatic activity in Italy has been confined to intensive sightseeing.

They found the Italian government exceedingly friendly and are reported to be going away convinced that Italy had no responsibility in the Russo-German pact, but there is no practical evidence of their feelings.

Ambassador Shiratori, incidentlly, also leaves tomorrow on the Conte de Savoia. He will stop at Washington to confer with the Japanese Ambassador there.

Persecutions Assailed

Vatican City, Sept. 15.—Vatican circles took the unusual step today of calling attention to Catholic persecutions in Germany, by permitting the official Vatican organ, Osservatore Romano, to comment critically on a Stefani dispatch from Berlin excusing the German measures. Considering the careful supervision to which the Osservatore Romano is subjected by the papal secretariat of state, this move must be considered significant.

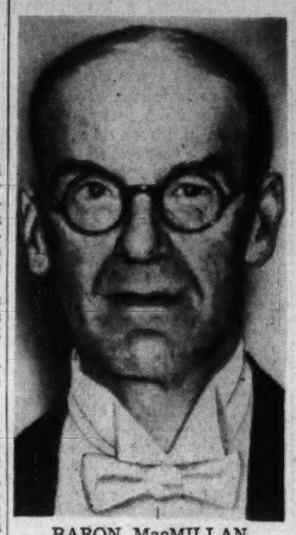
Stefani, which is a semi-official Italian agency, had sent a dispatch on the twelfth in which it stated "regarding stories printed in the foreign press about supposed anti-Catholic measures of the Reich, it is completely stated: recently a certain number of churches have been closed by Germany.

"These are buildings which are being from any habitations and do not offer the possibility, in case of aerial alarms, for the faithful to reach refuges in time.

"As far as the Catholic press is concerned, the restrictions have been adopted because of the scarcity of paper. A number of Catholic reviews and periodicals, therefore, has been reduced to five. All these measures anyway were likewise applied to the Evangelical church."

The Osservatore Romano starts out with a sharp reminder that the German anti-Catholic measures are not confined to the closing of churches and reducing the number of Catholic periodicals. It then points out that isolated churches would not be targets for bombs and hence "would not constitute places so dangerous that they must be kept permanently closed." As for the periodicals, the Osservatore remarks that there are 30,000,000 Catholics in Germany and five publications "cannot be justified, even by the necessity for restricting the consumption of paper."

British Censor Looks Like 'Prohibition'



BARON MacMILLAN, of Aberfeldy, 66-year-old jurist, is Britain's new minister of information. Yesterday he met the press, asked for complaints about the censorship, got plenty of them

He's Lean, Funereal, Taciturn and a Scot, But He Listens Well

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 15.—Oliver Hardy and the Archbishop of Canterbury are as much alike as Baron MacMillan, of Aberfeldy, Britain's new minister of information, and Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, who does the same job for Adolf Hitler.

Lord MacMillan met the general press for the first time today.

Except for his deep chuckle, this tall, blackcoated Scot of 66 is a ringer for the funeral figure which American cartoonists used to label "prohibition."

His glistening bald dome slopes to a wide forehead and horn rimmed glasses; his face is long, thin and concave. He sits hunched up like a judge and he talks like a judge charging a jury. In fact he is a judge.

He stuck a cigarette squarely in his mouth, lit it, tossed the match in the direction of a "No smoking" sign and asked for complaints.

He got them.

Listening is Lord MacMillan's business.

In addition to having been a conservative lord advocate in Ramsay Macdonald's Socialist government and serving as a lord of appeal in ordinary for nine years, he probably has headed more investigating commissions than any other man in Britain. They have ranged from commissions on lunacy to commissions on international conciliation.

He is following another familiar line in this war, too—his interest in the care of children. His country place in Surrey is host to several children dispersed from London's East End. He says they are hvaing a swell time. He has no children of his own.

He loves to work and can talk; and it is a good thing, too, because there is plenty for him to do. Once he talked for five hours in a tangled court action. Even Goebbels hasn't matched that.

Poison Ring 'Strong Man' Pleads Guilty

Philadelphia, Sept. 15 (AP).—The fourth trial in Philadelphia's insurance murders came to an abrupt end today when Cesare Valenti, huge former convict and alleged "strong arm man" for the murder ring, pleaded guilty to poisoning Charles Vavato in 1935.

Favato's 200-pound common law wife, Carina, and Ralph Polselli, self-styled "errand boy" for the ring, already have pleaded guilty to Favato's murder. Like Valenti, Mrs. Favato entered her plea after her trial was well under way.

Crews Ask War Pay, Delay Ships

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—Members of two United States Lines crews demanding extra benefits for sailing in war zones tonight held up the departure for England of the American Trader and American Traveler.

The American Trader had 53 passengers and the Traveler none. The crews refused to throw off their lines and the liners still were at their piers three hours after departure time.

Robertson Freed in Fire Controversy

Magistrate Acquits Bethesda Man on Trespass Charge; Civil Action Open

Samuel T. Robertson, Bethesda builder, last night was acquitted of a trespassing charge that climaxed the community's teapot tempest controversy over which of two zealous factions should have the right to douse the town fires.

The case arose after a fight between the Volunteer Fire Department of Bethesda, Inc., and the town fire board, which on July 1 installed Lieut. A. J. Bargagni as chief, over the volunteers' demand that their head, Hiram Musgrove, be given the office.

Subsequently the board issued orders forbidding certain of the volunteers, including Robertson, access to the firehouse. On August 28, however, about 25 volunteers arrived for a meeting at the firehouse and an argument developed between Robertson and fire board president, George W. Bryan, who later swore out a warrant for the arrest of Robertson, Musgrove and Harold R. Fremeau, another volunteer.

Trial Magistrate James C. Christopher decreed that Robertson was not guilty of the charge, since no criminal intent was proved. He reached the decision after an agreement on the facts of the case between the prosecutor, States Attorney Ben G. Wilkinson, and the counsel for the defense, former State's Attorney James H. Pugh.

Similar charges against Musgrove and Fremeau were nolled by agreement.

Bryan, the first witness, testified to a conversation between him and Robertson on the night of the volunteers' meeting, at which the latter was quoted as calling Bryan "a damn liar," asking him, "Who are you, the Lord?"

A procession of 80 witnesses was prepared to take the stand, but only 6 gave testimony, after which Magistrate Chistopher secured an agreement on the facts.

He implied that while no criminal trespass was proved, there might be grounds for a remedy by civil action.

Hurt Hunting Squirrel

Richard H. Wilson, 34, of Gaithersburg, Md., had the somewhat dubious honor of being first casualty of the Montgomery County squirrel hunting season, which opened yesterday.

Wilson was hunting squirrels on the farm of former Judge Harold C. Smith, near Darnestown, Md., when one of his victims became lodged in a tree. He climbed the tree to retrieve his game and fell, injuring his back and pelvis.

The injured man was taken to the Montgomery County General Hospital at Sandy Spring, Md., where X-rays of his injuries are to be made today.

The squirrel hunting season will remain open until October 15. The season for doves opened September 1 and will close September 30.

Open Paving Bids Monday

Bids for the proposed $15,000 street improvement program of Takoma Park, Md., will be opened at the monthly meeting of the town council Monday at 8 p. m.

The project includes the paving and curbs and gutters on six streets. The paving job will take in Takoma avenue between Philadelphia avenue and the corporation line; Valley View, from the end of the present paving to Willow avenue, and Erie avenue from Albemarle avenue to Erie avenue.

Concrete curb and gutters are proposed for Domer and Flower avenues to Sligo avenue; Boston avenue from Chicago avenue to Philadelphia avenue, except certain lots

Republican Picnic

Montgomery County Republicans will picnic today on the farm of Walter W. Rawson, on Rockville pike, near Rockville, Md. The affair is sponsored by the Young Republican Club of the county, the Thirteen and Seventh election districts Republican clubs, and the Federation of Republican Women of the county.

The picnic, scheduled to begin at 2:30 p. m., will include softball games, horseshoe pitching, archery and other games. It is intended as a prelude to the Constitution Day dance to be held tonight at the National Women's Country Club, near Bethesda.

Mrs. William A. Reutermann is chairman of the committee in charge, assisted by Maj. William Bullis, Miss Rose Dawson, Mrs. Lillian Smith, John Sadler, Kurtz Hansen, Van Beuren W. DeVries and Charles Murray.

To Present Bibles

Montgomery County Christian Endeavor will present bibles to Montgomery County General Hospital at exercises on the institution grounds tomorrow at 5:30 p. m.

The principal address will be delivered by the Rev. Edgar Cordell Powers, executive secetary of the Maryland Bible Society, and former pastor of Hunting Hill (Md.) Methodist Church, which he served jointly with the Eldebrooke Methodist Church in Washington from 1914 to 1918.

Grace Church Bazaar

Woodside—A country store and bazaar will be held today beginning at 2 p. m. at Grace Episcopal Church, under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary of the church. Features will be vegetables, fruits, cakes and pastries, fancy work, and a white-elephant table. A light supper will be served. Mrs. John Turner is chairman.

League Elects Officers

Burtonsville — The Burtonsville-Ashton League, a band of young people, has elected officers as follows: Miss Lula Beall, president; Miss Lillie Milstead, first vice president; Miss Lorriane Parkman, second vice president; Wilson Rich, third vice president; William Kincaid, fourth vice president; Miss Audrey Kimball, secretary; Russell Dants, treasurer.

Fairfax Club Sponsors Saber Melee Today

Duel on Horseback to Feature Tournament Near Alexandria

A saber bout on horseback, a rattling, frisky demonstration, will open the second Fairfax Club tournament on the club grounds near Alexandria at 1 p. m. today.

Engaged in the bout will be Col. E. Emerson and Lieut. Col. Guy Church, and Dr. John A. Sims and Capt. John Benney. Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, Ambassador of Ecuador and president of the Washington Fencers Club, will referee.

Then a troop of Fort Myer Cavalry, under Capt. L. R. Dewey and Sergt. Morris Jaffe, will give an exhibition drill. At 2:30 p. m., the novice tournament will come on, with professional riders beginning their tournament at 3:30. In this class, "knights" have signed from Maryland, the District of Columbia and Virginia. More than 20 have entered for the joust, which will be directed by A. D. (Dick) Langley, of Arlington—a rider and director of tournaments for 45 years.

Francis H. Fannon, of Alexandria, will charge the knights. Dr. Llewellyn Powell, of Alexandria, will be grand marshal.

The judges will be Estler M. Palmer and C. T. Jesse, of Arlington; Senator John Rust, Robert D. Graham, H. D. Hurst, R. S. Ross and Earl Popkins, of Fairfax. Mrs. H. D. Hurst, of Fairfax, will be official scorer.

Assisting the general chairman are Langley, Dr. Carson Lee Fifer, William K. Coakley, Fannon, Arthur C. Stickley 2d, and J. R. Kammer.

In case of rain the tournament will be postponed to next Saturday.

James' Holsteins Honored

In the report of the Fairfax Dairy Herd Improvement Association No. 1, issued yesterday, the high herd in both milk and butterfat production was the Grade Holstein herd of Graham M. James with 1,096.4 pounds of milk and 43.75 pounds of butterfat. The high cow in milk production was No. 27 A Grade Holstein owned by Graham M. James with 2,257 pounds. The high cow in butterfat production was No. 17 A Grade Holstein and Jersey owned by Mrs. Julian D. Thompson with 83.8 pounds. The five high herds in butterfat production were: First, Graham M. James; second, Mrs. J. D. Thompson; third, Mr. Allan Bradley; fourth, Middleton Brothers, and fifth, Mrs. E. H. Chilcott.

The Rev. Lynn Harold Hough, dean of Drew Theological Seminary, will speak at a special union service of the Vienna-Oakton churches tomorrow at 11 a. m. in the Vienna Presbyterian Church.

Md. Roads Board To Erect 3 New Laurel Buildings

Baltimore, Sept. 15 (AP).—The State roads commission announced today a group of three new buildings would be erected at the State roads garage at Laurel, Md.

Bids for the structures, an office building, shop and shed, will be opened October 3. Contracts will be taken for all construction, grading, and heating, plumbing and electrical equipment.

The commission also advertised for bids, to be opened September 26, on furnishing 650 tons of macadam paving and placing it in holes along the Reisterstown road between Pikesville and Reisterstown.

Emory & Henry Opens For Its 102d Term

Emory, Va., Sept. 15 (AP).—Emory and Henry College opened today for its 102d year. J. N. Hillman, president, presided at formal opening exercises in the college auditorium and greeted the students.

Additions to the college faculty and administration include Worth Young, alumnus of Emory and Henry and since 1928 a teacher in the Lansing (N.C.) High School; Paul Somers, jr., of Richmond, formerly an instructor at the University of Virginia; Edward L. Bird, of Peterburg, Va., and C. W. Steele, new treasurer and business manager.

Oyster Tonging Season Opens In Maryland

Crisfield and Other Seafood Centers Await Boom

By the Associated Press

Crisfield, Md., Sept. 15.—A seasonal business boom, presaging increases in employment and pay rolls, began for this seafood center today with the opening of the oyster tonging season.

Many watermen put out in their small boats, equipped with hand tongs to pluck the bivalves from oyster beds. Awaiting their hauls were numerous packing plants whose employes were prepared to shuck and ship the bay's "money crop" to distant points.

Tonging also began today in the waters of Wicomico County; in restricted areas of the Patuxent River in Calvert and St. Mary's counties, and in restricted areas of the Potomac River in Charles and St. Mary's counties.

Tonging began September 1 in some other counties, with early catches indicating this season's oysters wil be fat and luscious. Production in this section will reach its peak in November when dredge boats will be permitted to work.

Plentiful But Low-Priced

Baltimore, Sept. 15 (AP).—The conservation department reported today that oyster supplies were plentiful but that prices for small oysters were low.

Commission employes said one packer quoted prices on standard oysters, a smaller size, at 50 cents a gallon, with about two bushels needed to shuck a gallon. Prices for select and choice oysters, the larger sizes, are better.

Miss Bright Heads Hyattsville Group

Miss Peggy Bright has been elected president of the Young People's Society of Memorial Methodist Church, Hyattsville, and Mrs. L. C. Reeley, counselor.

Also named were Frank Bowers, first vice president; Marie Main, second vice president; Bernice Vogel, third vice president; Elizabeth Moore, fourth vice president; Alma Shumaker, secretary, and Albert Vogel, treasurer. Appointed as chairmen for the sixth annual banquet on October 6 were Elizabeth Moore, Peggy Bright and Edwin Hutchinson. The Rev. Walter Lockett, of Arlington, will speak.

Rev. J. H. Griffith Buried in Norfolk

Funeral services for the Rev. John Hammond Griffith, 58, were held Tuesday at Norfolk, Va., according to word received here yesterday. He died Sunday at Woodstock, Va., after a long illness.

Mr. Griffin retired in 1934. He had been rector of St. Luke's and the Church of the Epiphany in Norfolk and served several years as archdeacon of western North Carolina. He was a graduate of Episcopal High School, Alexandria, Washington and Lee University and the Episcopal Theological Seminary of Virginia.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Daisy Ravies Griffith; a son, John Hammond Griffith, of Arlington, Va., and three daughters, Mrs. Eugenia Griffith Warwick, of Washington; Mrs. Joseph de Rond Cranford, Bethesda, Md., and Mrs. George A. Mears, Asheville, N. C.

Record Enrollment Expected At Enlarged Madison College

1,200 to Register Next Week, Says President Duke

Special Dispatch to The Post

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 15.—Madison College, with $250,000 in campus improvements nearing completion, will welcome its largest student body, 1,200, for the thirty-first session Monday, President Samuel P. Duke said today.

Monday and Tuesday will be devoted to registration with classes starting Wednesday. Convocation exercises will be held Wednesday.

The $140,000 James Madison Library, which can house 100,000 volumes, and is planned to hold a Virginia collection of the papers of President Madison, will be completed by October 15.

Space occupied by the old library in Harrison Hall is being converted into student rooms and eight rooms for the music department. The postoffice will be moved from Wilson Hall to the basement of Harrison Hall and the present quarters occupied by a classroom and offices.

The $72,000 heating plant, erected below the hill in the rear of the campus, will be in full operation for the first time. The space occupied by the old heating plant in the Harrison Hall service building has been converted into a dining hall seating 150. The college now has three dining halls seating 1,000.

Additional dormitory space has been provided in the Home Economics Building, in Jackson Hall, and in an apartment house, just across South Main street, which has been leased by the college.

President Duke said 1,035 students already have made reservations and he expects 200 day students. He expects a larger number than before to register for the bachelor of science courses.

Dr. Henry A. Converse is retiring as registrar, an office he has held since 1912 and will continue as professor of mathematics. He will be succeeded as registrar by Miss Helen Frank, registrar of New College, Columbia University.

There will be 11 aditional faculty members as follows:

E. N. McWhite, assistant professor of physics, from Duke University; Richard H. Loxdon, librarian from the University of Chicago; Dr. Mary T. Armentrout, associate professor of history and social sciences, from Winthrop College; Miss Louise Covington, instructor in physical education, from Vanderbilt University; Miss Ada Felch, assistant dietitian, from the Convalescent Home of the Boston Children's Hospital; Landon Sanders, assistant professor of business education, from Pineville, Ky., high school; Dr. Leland Schubert, associate professor of English, from Eastern Illinois Teachers College; William O. Stanley, assistant professor of education, from Columbia; Miss Edythe Schneider, instructor in voice, from Woman's College, North Carolina; Miss Marana Gee, supervisor of home economics, from Bridgewater High School, and Alfred K. Eagle, counselor of education, from superintendency of public schools, of Radford, Va.

Va. Methodist Group to Meet For First Time

October Sessions to Mark Division From Baltimore Body

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Sept. 15.—The Virginia and Baltimore conferences of the old Southern Methodist Church will cease to exist as such next month when the new Virginia conference of the United Methodist Church holds its first organizational meeting here October 16-18.

Preceding the Richmond meeting, the old Baltimore Conference will meet at Roanoke October 2-4 and the Virginia Conference at Danville October 10-12 to hear reports and close the year's work preparatory to entering the reorganized conferences.

The Holston conference, which as in the past includes a number of southwest Virginia churches, will meet at Knoxville, Tenn., October 5.

Under the revision of conference boundary lines, Virginia members of the old Baltimore Conference will become part of the new Virginia Conference. Maryland members will enter a conference of Maryland churches and West Virginia churches will become part of the West Virginia Conference.

Norfolk Southern Set To Ask New Charter

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 15 (AP).—Reorganization plans of the Norfolk Southern Railroad have progressed to such a degree that application for a charter for the new company will be made to the State corporation commission, probably tomorrow, Col. W. B. Rodman, general counsel, said today.

His statement was made at a hearing before Judge Luther B. Way in Federal District Court on a motion to amend the reorganization plan. He added that the company would be reorganized at a meeting to be held in the near future. The road is now in the hands of receivers.

Traffic Deaths Cut in Maryland

Traffic fatalities in Maryland increased 8.3 per cent last month over August, 1938, the State Commissioner of Motor Vehicles reported yesterday in Baltimore.

Sixteen pedestrians were killed during the month, while 20 motorists and four cyclists lost their lives.

Alexandria C. of C. to Seek New Members

Greene Announces Drive to Be Held Monday to Saturday

A membership campaign will be conducted by the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce Monday through Saturday, it was announced yesterday by Martin E. Greene, business manager. Efforts will be made to contact every businessman who is not connected with the chamber.

In announcing plans for the campaign, Greene said an increase in membership is necessary if the chamber is to carry out its program of civic development and community improvement. The increase of the population in Alexandria has brought added problems to the trade body, he said.

All present members of the chamber will be asked to cooperate, and additional committees to serve in conjunction with the drive will be appointed Monday.

Pastor At St. Rita's

The Rev. Thomas Finnegan, former assistant pastor of the Colonial Beach Catholic Church, has been appointed assistant pastor of St. Rita's Church, Mount Ida, in Alexandria. The present pastor, the Rev. Leonard J. Koster, is now recovering from a serious illness, and until his return, Father Finnegan will be in charge of the parish.

A resident of New York City, Father Finnegan was ordained last June and assigned to the Virginia Diocese.

Ella Burke Dies

Ella Burke, wife of John M. Burke, 1215 Duke street, Alexandria, died yesterday at Alexandria Hospital after a short illness. Besides her husband, she leaves a daughter, Mrs. Walter Moore, and a son, John S. Burke.

Health Officer Considered

Appointment of a temporary health officer to replace Dr. W. Lewis Schafer, who leaves tomorrow to enroll in a post-graduate course at Harvard University, probably would be announced Monday, City Manager Carl Budwesky said yesterday. The city health board is considering three physicians who have been recommended for the position.

Unless the new officer can report for duty Monday, which is considered unlikely, a member of the health department will serve temporarily.

Four Are Injured As Autos Crash Near Frederick

A Washington couple and two Frederick, Md., men were seriously injured last night in a collision 3 miles south of Frederick near Frederick Junction. All four were rushed to the Frederick City hospital.

The Washington couple was Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Turner, of 1326 Tenth street northwest, who were driving toward Frederick. In the other automobile were Joseph Elkins, jr., and Evans Kefauver, both of Frederick. None of the four was able to give an account of the accident.

Arlington Red Cross Roll Call to Open

7,500 Members Is Goal Of Drive Beginning Tomorrow in County

With a goal of 7,500 members, the annual Red Cross roll call will open tomorrow in Arlington County, Va.

The drive last year went over the top and put the county first in the State in Red Cross membership. The goal was 5,000 and 6,000 members were enrolled.

County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan earlier this week issued a proclamation setting aside September 17 to 30 for the drive. He said:

"Our community has never failed to respond to the Red Cross call for assistance and, for this reason, I feel confident that we shall be proud to enroll our share of the million more members."

The Woman's Club of Arlington announced yesterday it would sponsor the drive in the Arlington district. Mrs. George Collier has been named chairman.

Hatch Law Change Asked In Maryland

Meeting in Colmar Manor Urges U. S. Workers Be Allowed Part in Local Politics

Amendment of the Hatch act to permit Federal workers to campaign and hold office in municipal elections was urged in a resolution adopted by the Prince Georges County Municipal Association in Colmar Manor, Md.

The resolution points out that in some of the towns of the county, 95 per cent of the eligible candidates are Government employes. It was voted to ask Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer and other Maryland Congressmen to work for the change.

The 23 town councils of the county are to urge Congressman Sasscer to exert every effort to have the law changed. The Attorney General has ruled that town officials now holding office can remain but that they cannot campaign for re-election because of the Hatch act.

The group decided to appoint a committee to study the costs of the incinerator being constructed by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission near Bladensburg to determine whether it is feasible for the towns to join in the project. The next meeting will be held at Fairmont Heights.

Horse Show Today

Approximately 18 classes for horses will be held at the horse show to be given at 2:30 p. m. today at the University of Maryland by the University of Maryland Block and Bridle Club and the Vansville District Horse and Pony Association. The classes will include riding school and ride and drive events.

Judges are: Lieut. Col. James R. Sperry, of Fort Myer, Va.; Prof. K. C. Ikler, and Prof. James B. Outhouse, both of the university; F. Larmour Oyster, of North Chevy Chase, Md.; Humphrey Finney, and J. David Schaffer.

Glass Worker Hurt

Randolph Jones, 19, of Alexandria, Va., an employe of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., was injured seriously yesterday, when his wrist was cut by a pane of glass he was inserting in a window at the University of Maryland.

An artery and tendon were cut. He was taken to the Garfield Hospital by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad. Jones was working on the new home economics addition.

Baptists to Mark Thirtieth Year of Clarendon Church

The Clarendon Baptist Church tomorrow will celebrate the thirtieth year of the congregation's organization and the fifteenth year of the Rev. Perry R. Mitchell's pastorate.

Minutes of the original organization meeting of the church will be read at the 11 a. m. services; reminiscences will be given by charter members, and the minister will review his career there. Representatives of the woman's missionary union, the youth societies and others will participate.

Commencement exercises of the church school will feature the night service, with the Rev. Mr. Mitchell making the main address.

First Baptist, Alexandria

The First Baptist Church of Alexandria will hold a rally day program at its morning service tomorrow. Dr. Pierce S. Ellis, pastor of the church, will speak. A bus and 30 cars have been provided to call for members to take them to the church.

Those 'Angels' Clean Up on Earle Screen

'Dead End' Kids Renovate a City; Amiable Stage Revue

"ANGELS WASH THEIR FACES." Warner Brothers picturization of a screen play by Michael Fessier, Niven Busch and Robert Bruckner, from an idea by Jonathan Finn, with Ann Sheridan, the "Dead End" Kids, Ronald Reagan, Bonita Granville, Frankie Thomas, Henry O'Neill, Eduardo Ciannelli, Berton Churchill, Bernard Nedell, Dick Rich, Jack Searl, Margaret Hamilton, Marjorie Main, Minor Watson, Grady Sutton, Aldrich Bowker, Cyrus Kendall, Robert Strange, Egon Brecher and Sarah Padden. Directed by Ray Enright. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

Of all the people to look to for a pack of good clean fun, the "Dead End" kids and Ann "Oomph" Sheridan could hardly be expected to figure in even a Literary Digest poll. But in "Angels Wash Their Faces," the Earle presents these customary disciples of the Wrong Road in a film that is at an amusing best when in an "Our Gang" vein.

Imagine then, the situation which results from a "Boys' Week" contest when Billy Halop and his hoodlums take over the running of a city to clean out a dirty administration. A legal document becomes a "writ of hocus-pokus," a law of a century before, forbidding bowling on Sunday, is joyfully resurrected and the city hall corridors become grounds for rough-and-tumble action. All of the crooks who have been looking down their noses at the filthy rabble of the slums get what they merit except, we regret to recall, the sloppy mayor who, at the final fadeout, is well on his way to the governorship.

A Boy Mayor

The rapid-fire movement of the film, as well as the slightly mad notion of putting the rascals in such high office, fans sparks of interest into what becomes a roar of laughter from the audience.

Motivating force for the erstwhile toughies' reformation is the unjust imprisonment of Frankie Thomas, playing the role of Ann Sheridan's young brother. The questionable profession of swindling insurance companies is practiced by Eduardo Ciannelli and Bernard Nedell and they seek to place their arson on other shoulders. But the "Termites," as the kids call themselves, are fond of the new member of their gang on whom the blame is placed and despite nasty teacher, Margaret Hamilton, they contrive to have their leader win the temporary mayoralty. He makes things happen.

Amusing Stage Revue

The Earle stage proceedings, while not so gala as usual, have amusing spots, one of which is the disastrous attempt of the Slate Brothers at tumbling and another the graceful Flower Basket dance of the Roxyettes.

Headliners are the Slate Brothers, purveyors of Broadway brashness, who weave in and out of the revue with their foolishness. With them is a blond cronette, Fay Carroll. The Quintones, four boys and a girl, harmonize and Sunny Rice exhibits her taps. The Jansleys handle the acrobatics with proper flourish, particularly when heaving the Brothers Slate force and aft.

A comic Indian cartoon and the Paramount News complete a bill that is entertaining, but in no sense sensational. RICHARD L. COE.

Palace

"THE STAR MAKER." Paramount picturization of a story by Arthur Caesar and William A. Pierce, suggested by the career of Gus Edwards, adapted to the screen by Frank Butler, Don Hartman and Mr. Caesar, starring Bing Crosby, with Louise Campbell, Linda Ware, Ned Sparks, Laura Hope Crews, Janet Waldo, Walter Damrosch, Thurston Hall, Clara Blandick, Oscar O'Shea, John Gallaudet, Ben Weldon, Emory Parnell, Dorothy Vaughn, Bodil Rosing, Paul Stanton and Morgan Wallace. Music and lyrics by Johnny Burke, James V. Monaco and Gus Edwards. Directed by Roy Del Ruth. Previewed Tuesday, September 12. At the Palace Theater.

Bubbling Bing Crosby and a screenful of kids celebrate the impending opening of schools in the Palace's new musical film, "The Star Maker."

Bing is his genial self and the general plethora of precocity while too predominant a factor, is not overly annoying. The old songs—"In My Merry Oldsmobile" and "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now" among them—are pleasant; the new ones—"An Apple for the Teacher" and "Go Fly A Kite" to name two—are already familiar. And one number is particularly novel for so established a tune. With the bait of a bouncing ball above the syllables of the song, the Palace audience is urged to contribute to the pleasantries by chanting "School Days! School Days!

The film is a tribute to Gus Edwards, the "star maker" himself. It is a story which has been done, nonetheless, time and again. Larry Earl is the hopeful composer who wants to get his music sung. He hits on the idea of child singers to introduce them and—through his wife's silent intervention—his idea gains the necessary attention of theater-man Proctor. The child groups of hopeful and untrained youngsters take over the country the way Maj. Bowes' adults were to do some years later, but the child labor law, that bugaboo of today's Washington theater world, takes a look and says "No."

Introduces Linda Ware

The results are sketchy according to "The Star Maker," but they do permit the Paramount counter-Durbin attack, Linda Ware, the opportunity to sing a Chaikovski waltz with Dr. Walter Damrosch and the Los Angeles Symphony. The Ware voice is promising for her 14 years, although she lacks the charm of the incomparable Deanna, to whom she inevitably must be compared.

The other adolescents are typical of such a breed. To those who find the sight of carefree childhood struggling with buck-and-wings and effortless head tones on the tiresome side, the wunderkinder of "The Star Maker" offer only a carniverous appeal, but the adults who dote on youthful talent will find it vastly satistying.

And, of course, the ingratiating Mr. Crosby is very much in evidence, playing a twinkling school master or worrying about his song-writing career. His new role only proves further that his is a unique and likeable film personality. Dr. Damrosch's brief appearance is natural and benevolent.

If you can picture grouchy Ned Sparks as a press agent, whose lot it is to play nursemaid to the children and even to be quarantined with them for ten days, you will relish the thought. Louise Campbell is the wife and Laura Hope Crews has a field day as Linda's mother, who once was an opera singer. R. L. C.

'Thunder Afloat' Cheered at Capitol Premiere; Keith's Presents New Star in 'The Under-Pup'

Wallace Beery Star Of Exciting Story Of 'Splinter Fleet'; Varied Stage Revue

"THUNDER AFLOAT." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Ralph Wheelwright and Commander Harvey Haislip, starring Wallace Beery, with Chester Morris, Virginia Grey, Douglas Dumbrille, Carl Esmond, Clem Bevans, John Qualen, Regis Toomey, Phillip Terry and Charles West. Directed by George Seitz. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

A rousing, flag-waving, highly amusing and at the same time intensely thrilling melodrama of the "splinter fleet's" encounter with the U-boat blockade during the first World War, yesterday had overflowing houses alternately cheering and roaring with laughter when Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Thunder Afloat" was accorded its world premiere on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater.

BELL

Here is a factual recital of heroic achievements on the high seas a quarter-century ago that is given a keenly personalized dramatic punch by the casting of rival peacetime tugboat captains as its central figures. One is an amenable young fellow who slips naturally into the strict discipline of the U. S. Navy, when assigned to the "splinter fleet" of little wooden submarine chasers; the other a rugged individualist who enters the service to pay off a grudge against the U-boat commander who had sunk his tug and barges and thinks the Navy will be an advantageous point from which to wage a one-man war. Romantic zest is lent the tale by the gradual melting of a bitter feud into something akin to love between Rocky Blake and the daughter of Jon Thorson, his erstwhile competitor in private trade.

Heroism Is Emphasized

Little stress is laid in the picture upon the notoriously meager equipment and makeshift manning of the tiny, 110-foot, wooden battlewagons. The whole force of the pictured narrative is put behind their miraculous accomplishments in a time of great national need. There is the first blundering search for a submarine that is right under them; the blowing up of the lightship, the utilization of a decoy schooner, to lure the submersible, and the final depth-bombing of the sub engineered by the headstrong lug who had muffed it the first time.

All this is the stuff of which loud hurrahs are made, especially in times like the present. But "Thunder Afloat" loses nothing of the savor of magnificent daring and accomplishment by its occasional resort to devices that are theatrically sure-fire. There are times when the breaking out of the American flag is precisely what would happen, even if there are no times when such an act would not be cheered.

Wallace Beery is star of the picture in more than name. His portrayal of the private seaman, who surrenders his personal freedom of thought and action slowly and grudgingly, represents one of the best and most successfully maneuvered performances he has contributed to the screen in recent months. He is closely seconded by Chester Morris, whose crisp young officer also is a true and moving creation. As the feminine "old salt," who has never failed to share her father's dangers until he joins the Navy, Virginia Grey turns in a completely competent job of high-spirited acting, with a fine change of pace. Regis Toomey is another whose activities add to the tenseness and suspense of a high-geared film of tempestuous action that frequently is as amusing as it is violent. Douglas Tumbrille, Carl Esmond, as the U-boat commander, and a considerable list of others assist in making "Thunder afloat" a pretty important item of entertainment.

Swifts Head Stage Bill

The stage bill at the Capitol this week is put a little in the light of an anti-climax. The acts are individually clever enough, but somehow fail to jell into anything that is particularly well defined or skillfully patterned. The Three Swifts, those inimitable Indian club jugglers, are the outstanding hits, as they usually are. Harry Kahne executes a number of nimble mental tricks on large blackboards, Loper and Barratt swirl through some engaging ballroom dances and Staples and Carney sing conventionally and in that sort of dress. Edna Strong is a capable tap dancer and the Rhythm Rockets, of course, appear in diversified routines.

The Fox Movietone News and the orchestral overture augment a feature that is lent added effectiveness by a patriotic stage prelude done in red, white and blue. A distinguished list of official guests gave an additional touch of importance to the "Hollywood premiere" ceremonies observed at last night's 9 o'clock performance.

VIRGINIA GREY,
cast in the role of Susan Thorson, ocean-bred daughter of a roustabout tugboat captain, in "Thunder Afloat," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's flag-waving melodrama of the "splinter fleet," which yesterday was given its world premiere at Loew's Capitol Theater. Wallace Beery and Chester Morris have the leading male roles, and lusty roles they are

Gloria Jean Stars Both as Singer and Juvenile Actress In Lively Comedy

"THE UNDER-PUP." Universal picturization of a story by I. A. R. Wylie, adapted to the screen by Grover Jones, starring Gloria Jean, with C. Aubrey Smith, Robert Cummings, Nan Grey, Beulah Bondi, Virginia Weidler, Margaret Lindsay, Billy Gilbert, Ann Gillis, Raymond Walburn, Paul Cavanagh, Samuel S. Hinds, Shirley Mills, Doris Lloyd, Spencer Charters and Maris Farnum. Directed by Richard Wallace. Reviewed Friday morning. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

As has been so numerously reported from other metropolitan centers, Universal's production of "The Under-Pup," revealed yesterday for the first time in Washington to enthusiastic audiences at RKO-Keith's Theater, is of two-fold interest. It presents a thoroughly diverting story of youthful friendships and animosities and introduces a young singing star of unusual capabilities in the person of 11-year-old Gloria Jean.

Gloria Jean is a remarkably attractive young woman with a double claim to distinction on the screen. While her voice is in no sense phenomenal, it shows the result of careful training, the age of its owner being what it is, and is of pure and limpid quality with a true and entirely pleasant upper range. When she sings, her eyes shine with the sparkle of huge personal enjoyment and never are there revealed any of the painful affectations of the typical "child prodigy." But it is in her ability to cope with all the moods of a story that ranges from hilarious comedy to tender pathos that Gloria displays her richest endowments as an exceptional child actress. The girl has a way with her. A natural, disarming and utterly delightful way that should carry her far.

An Ideal Vehicle

The film play adapted by Grover Jones from a story by I. A. R. Wylie pretends to no sensational touches of novelty, but serves, nevertheless, as an almost ideal vehicle for the introduction of a vivacious and charming young personality to cinema audiences. In the role of the quaintly named "Pip-Emma" Binns, daughter of a slightly crackpot family from the wrong end of the city, Gloria becomes the "guest" at a girls' camp of the ultra rich through an essay contest. Even before the wooded retreat is reached, "Pip-Emma" makes the discovery that she has been cast among the snobs, who deem her beneath their social level. Not only does she overcome these youthful antagonisms, but in the process more or less straightens out the lives of a pair of rich parents on the verge of a divorce; the crabed director of the camp, her romantic assistant and divers and sundry others, including the Croesus whose money is the main support of the swanky resort.

Here, then, are rich opportunities for comedy, tenderness, spunk, tears, song and laughter of which full advantage has been taken. Producer Joseph Pasternak has seen to it that Gloria Jean's debut is hardly less auspicious than that of his earlier protege, Deanna Durbin. Deanna, to be sure, has much that Gloria lacks. It is not less true that Gloria possesses asset that are lacking from Deanna's abundant equipment. These two should not collide, even if they are stars on the same lot.

Support Uniformly Excellent

Thoroughly agreeable supporting performances are contributed by C. Aubrey Smith, as a crotchety old grandfather; Beulah Bondi, as the camp director, whose heart is softened by the kid from the wrong side of the tracks; Robert Cummings and Nan Grey, as the romantic young couple; Raymond Walburn and Billy Gilbert, in a cut-to-order comedy part, and a host of youngsters led by Virginia Weidler, Shirley Mills, Ann Gillis and two mischievous and anonymous youngsters who appear as Billy Gilbert's sons.

Not addicted to the common or garden variety of "kid picture," this bachelor bystander found "The Under-Pup" a thoroughly enjoyable bit of light entertainment, an impression he was happy to find corroborated by enthusiastic audience applause at its final fadeout.

"Soldiers With Wings," the latest "March of Time" release, is reassuring in its depiction of the strength of this country's air forces. Those "flying fortresses" would reassure anybody—if we just had a few more of them. An animated cartoon comedy, "Hollywood Sweepstakes," in color, and the Pathe News complete a bill that is highly recommended for every member of the family from baby to great-grandma and including all the boys.

Columbia

"Lady of the Tropics," opening a repeat engagement at the Columbia yesterday, can most easily be described as an "unconscious comedy."

Robert Taylor and Hedy Lamarr, the leading purveyors of screen glamour, do all they can with the feeble plot about a half-caste girl in Indo-China who marries an American tourist. The spectacle of mystic-eyed Hedy getting a Bronxian love bop on the jaw from Robert, and being called his "unpredictable little screwball" is a trifle too much to be borne without an occasional guffaw.

Dressed in flowing robes, high-collared, longsleeved and sweeping the earth regally, Miss Lamarr is better when she merely poses decoratively. Mr. Taylor is remembered for the scene in which he finds his wife has been consorting with halfcaste gentleman, and for a rather remarkable suit he wears early in the picture. It buttons up to here, has pleats in the back, and makes Mr. Taylor more than ever the well-dressed college senior. Joseph Schildkraut turns in the most honest portrayal in the entire cast.

There is a short having to do with landing huge fish in southern waters.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Sept. 15.

DIST. ATTY. DEWEY: You'll have a tougher time now, trying to get Lepke away from the Federal men. Although their narcotics charge against him seems unimportant, in case of a custody fight a murder note will be introduced—in connection with the death of a narcotic runner named Gottleib . . . Thomas Mann: Your daughter, Erika, will return to America this week. She's written a new book called "The Other Germany" . . . Brenda Frazier: Donald Livingston, brother of the boy with whom you once were linked by the columns, was scheduled to work in the Conga Line at Leon & Eddie's. Billy refused to permit it, but now his brother will work in one of the road companies. His mother, the socialite Mrs. Havemeyer, joined the Conga Line there last night—and approved.

HARPO MARX: Your brother, Groucho, was invited to appear on the "Information Please" program . . . He demanded an exorbitant fee, which the producers refused to meet . . . "If you broadcast," they assured him, "you'll find it very interesting and you'll have a lot of fun" . . . "I'm through working for dear old Rutgers," Groucho replied. "I'm now working for the wife and kids."

CIVIL LIB. UNION: When Ben Marden, owner of the Riviera, was purged of his contempt-of-court, he also succeeded in having the record expunged. His finger prints and photo were returned to him . . . Lic. Comm. Moss: The Irving Place Burlesque shows, long dormant, will be revived shortly. Okay? . . . Dixie Davis: Your colleague, Harry Schoenhaus, is unable to join you here. He's left New York—forever, he insists . . . Erich Maria Remarque: The first book about the current European war already has been completed. The author is Theodore Draper, who will sail for America, with the manuscript, next Sunday.

JAMES JOYCE: Gertrude Stein, whose favorite phrase is "A Rose is a Rose is a Rose is a Rose," cabled the Modern Age Books, suggesting that they publish a cheap edition of her collected poetry . . . Louis Birk of Modern Age replied: "Sorry, sorry, sorry. No Sale is no Sale is no Sale."

BROADWAY ASSN.: The N. Y. City Information Center will open on Forty-second street on November 1 . . . Anita Loos: One of your friends, who went to Sing Sing to witness the premiere of your "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," wore a heavy gold bracelet. During the intermission, she chatted with an inmate who asked whether the bracelet was made of real gold. "You know, madam," he reminded her, "some of us are in here for less than that." . . . Benny Goodman: The World's Fair will inaugurate a new policy in entertainment. They'll install big-name bands in one of the empty buildings and offer free dancing to all comers. Eddy Duchin will start it on September 22.

HELENA RUBINSTEIN: The outbreak of war ruined Peaches Browning's much-publicized figure . . . Peaches, who came home last week, had signed for a series of weight-reduction treatments in Paris. Before the treatments were scheduled to begin she went to a nearby vacation resort and paid no heed to diet—secure in the knowledge that the treatments would make the new extra poundage disappear . . . But then came the outbreak of hostilities and Peaches had to rush home—plumper than ever.

MAYOR LaGUARDIA: What's become of your plan to set up a force of local G-men? The city is still paying rent for those Woolworth Building offices—which once had been occupied by Tom Dewey . . . Viki Baum: Lionel Stander has been signed to appear in your new play, and is so confident of a long run that he's taken a long-term lease on a Greenwich Village apartment.

HARRY REVEL: Mack Gordon, your former partner, has written his first song since you two separated. He wrote it with Jimmy Van Heusen. It's called "Speaking of Heaven" . . . Theater Guild: The billing for the next Lunt & Fontanne production will read: "Alfred Lunt & Lynne Fontanne" Present Their Outrageous Production of 'The Taming of the Shrew.'"

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS: When Alexander Korda's movie, "Thief of Bagdad," is presented here, it will feature Morton Selten, who had been one of Britain's most promising actors . . . In the final scene of the movie Selten's line to Sabu is: "Now this old head will lie down in eternal sleep" . . . After completing this scene Selten left the studio, went home to sleep—and never woke up.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 15.

"The Real Glory" was pretty gory, but I loved it. Goldwyn certainly has a winner. It's so chuck-full of action you're sure the villain will get you. Gary Cooper was never better; that goes for David Niven and Broderick Crawford. My, how we've wasted him to date. Also Kay Johnson. Soldiers howled at this line in the picture: "If you believe in marriage, never say yes to a soldier." And as I came out, one of them said: "Wouldn't you know Mr. Goldwyn would have a better war than that going on in Europe?"

HOPPER

At Paramount they tell me poor Madeleine Carroll is a wreck, hasn't slept for weeks, with parents living near Croydon, a husband (whom she's divorcing) in the Army, to say nothing of a chateau outside of Paris and a yacht anchored in the south of France.

When Rod la Rocque and Cedric Hardwicke were discussing the war, Rod was saying: "Any minute we may hear Hitler has blown London into the sea." Hardwicke said: "That's not the point, old boy. It's what will history think of Hitler a hundred years hence?"

In 89 years, we've got what all the world is looking for—peace and plenty. Eighty-nine years ago California joined the union.

When a waiter at Cannes asked Norma Shearer for an autographed picture, she said: "I'll give it to you tomorrow, when I open my trunks." "Sorry, I can't wait. I'm leaving for the front tonight," said he.

Jimmy Stewart's spent 11 days in Europe. He and a Frenchman motored 2,700 miles in those 11 days through France. Jimmy said: "I can't pronounce any of the names, but I saw it all. Why, I'd never been on a boat before. And now I get Dietrich for a partner—am I a lucky stiff?"

What's in a name? Plenty! Hear that Geraldine Fitzgerald, since making "Give Me a Child," is about to have one of her own.

After the last benefit party given for the migratory workers, a Hollywood wit said: "Soon those workers will be giving us benefits, because they're now all comfy from benefits." And I'm told the only reason Steinbeck's nose is out of joint with Darryl Zanuck is that they've given "Grapes of Wrath" a happy ending. Imagine! And did Steinbeck tell off the Hal Roach studio when they tried to get him to pose for publicity pictures advertising "Of Mice and Men." Wow — can he sling language?

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 15 (1935).—The report that George Brent is in a sanitarium is erroneous. What George is actually doing is retiring in a quiet place where he often goes following a picture. Too bad that he wasn't at "The Rains Came" premiere to hear all the nice things that were said about his performance as Ransome. He gets back next week to play Capt. Donovan, commander of "The Fighting Sixty-ninth," the story of Father Duffy and his crack regiment.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Funny thing about the Donovan role. Wild Bill, as he is called, requested Warners to let George, who is also 100 per cent Irishman, impersonate him. Just to see that it is all according to Hoyle, Donovan, who has been hunting big game in Alaska, will head here to talk with Brent and discuss the story with Warners.

You'll pardon me if we get away from war news for a moment and take a look at Hollywood's own private war—the coming battle of the Academy awards. It's about the half-way mark since Bette Davis and Spencer Tracy walked away with last year's Oscars. Since then, there have been so many outstanding performances that I'm sure you will agree with me it's going to be tough to pick a "winnah." Bette is again very much in "he fore with her "Dark Victory," "Jaurez" and "The Old Maid." But somehow I feel Bette will not win this year's trophy, for we cannot turn over top honors to Bette every year. Also, she has competition this year from Greer Garson in "Goodbye Mr. Chips," Rosalind Russell in "The Women," Irene Dunne in "Love Affair" and Anna Neagle as "Nurse Edith Cavell." At this distance, it seems to me that Laurence Olivier might have a slight edge for male honors with his memorable portrayal in "Wuthering Heights." But he has real rivalry from the supporters of Charles Boyer in "Love Affair," Brian Aherne in "Juarez," Robert Donat in "Goodbye Mr. Chips," and Henry Fonda as "Young Mr. Lincoln." Also, Spencer Tracy cannot be overlooked in "Stanley and Livingstone."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Lupe Velez and her sister, Queenie, headed for Mexico City to see their mother, who is very ill; Robert Stack, who has been spending all of his time with pretty Cobina Wright, jr., at the Hollywood Derby with Wendy Barrie; Alice Joyce Brown, Clarence's bride, has lost pounds and it's very becoming. She says she did it ice skating; the gayest premiere of the season was "The Rains Came." The Darryl Zanucks took their guests on to the Troc. Claudette Colbert, in a bright red dress with matching turban, was one of the most striking looking women in the room. Ty Power, with his mother and sister, looked like a lost soul without his Annabella; Myrna Loy outdid herself in white gown, ermine coat and jewels, and looked beautiful; Irene Dunne wore one of the new bustles, and only a gal as slim as she is could get away with it; Myron Selznick was with Bart Marshall and Lee Russell, and for the first time since I've known him, left before closing time.

The Jules Steins, back from New York, entertained a party including Eddie Sutherland, Edwina Mandel, Lili Damita and Mr. Robinson from New York. Lili wore a gown that she must have been sewed into. Lana Turner also had a skin-tight gold creation that created much attention when she danced with Greg Bautzer; Bob Cobb, who has been laid up with a bad throat, is reported better. Ditto Harry Brand who has been forbidden to talk over the telephone until he is well again; the charity luncheons Ann Lehr is holding every day at Somerset House are bringing out the film people. Bobbie Fidler (Mrs. Jimmy) is her co-hostess.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Metropolitan

"The Old Maid," one of the distinguished films of the year, yesterday at the Metropolitan entered its fourth downtown week.

The Bette Davis-Miriam Hopkins film is frankly sentimental, but it attends so strictly to its purpose and is so well filmed a story that it must be classed as a highly satisfactory picture. From Edith Wharton comes its story of the two sisters and their love for the same man. But while the one spurns him for the wealth of another, the less selfish tries to console him. Before he dies in the Civil War, his child is born to this unmarried maiden. Into those prim days, the girl carves a place for her daughter, but only at her own expense.

The hatred and jealousy of the one woman for her maiden sister is a stirring and bitter emotion, admirably portrayed by Miriam Hopkins. Miss Davis is equally successful as the loving mother, who must pose a the cheerless old maid, and Jane Bryan is excellent as her disputed daughter. George Brent, Donald Crisp, Louise Fazenda and Cecilia Loftus are others in the cast.

Cards Gain Half Game as Reds Split

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

(News item.—"Virginia Tech accuses Naval Academy of 'grabbing' freshman football stars.")

Navy very indignantly denies the charge and Director of Athletics Capt. E. W. McKee ads, furthermore, that he has never heard of Brud Montgomery, the 195-pound end whom Navy is accused of luring from V. P. I. But college football in the past has not been above that sort of thing.

POVICH

When Lou Little was Georgetown's coach back in the middle twenties, he showed a preference for the sturdy young sons of Slavish immigrants who settled in Pennsylvania's mining fields and his talent scouting trips often took him to that sector. When Georgetown set up its pre-season training camp at Wildwood, N. J., Little was especially proud of a pair of tackles he had hauled out of the coal fields.

They were big, bruising young chaps with unpronounceable names and Little was elated, too, at the fact, that they had been honor students in high school. Their credits were in perfect order and scholastically they were acceptable to any college. They were to be freshmen at Georgetown, of course, and thus ineligible for varsity competition that season, but Little envisioned his tackle worries at an end for three years following.

Colleges Not So Free With Scholarships Now

Georgetown that season was sharing the Wildwood field with the University of Pennsylvania football squad. The Hoyas worked out in the morning and Penn in the afternoon. A week after Georgetown had been in camp, Little took the afternoon off to saunter out to Penn's practice. In the Penn lineup he saw the same two big tackles who had practiced with Georgetown that morning. Penn alumni had "reached" the lads.

Little had no recourse. The fellows actually had not matriculated at Georgetown, what with the opening of college still a week distant. Those were the days of open bidding for young football players and the school which made the best offer landed the best recruits.

Colleges have not been so free with their scholarships in recent years, although likely-looking young prep and high school graduates may still shop around for the best spots to play football. George Washington University coaches encountered a rare young salesman a couple of years ago. The lad had virtually agreed to enter G. W. U. on the promise that he would be given a chance to work out his tuition.

Before the first call to practice, he advised G. W. coaches that his plans were still indefinite. Another college had made him an offer, he said, and it was more attractive than George Washington's. But he would like to live in Washington, he wrote, and would play football for G. W. if the school would pay the transportation of not only himself but also his wife and baby!

Faculty Men Crack Down on Coaches

Time was when a football coach could spot a rugged young schoolboy football player and induct him into college with little difficulty but faculty men have cracked down harshly on those free-and-easy tactics. They have raised entrance requirements to the point that 60 per cent of the budding young football players are turned back at the gates for lack of credits. At Georgetown, for example, the high school boy who didn't finish among the first third of his class, scholastically, is not acceptable except on probation, and woe to the lad who seeks to enter Georgetown without at least two years of language credits.

Coaches have been so hard-driven by the faculty men that of late they have adopted a new tack. They have found it expedient to maintain their recruits in prep school for at least two years to insure their college credits.

The Naval and Military Academies used to operate from a point of vantage not available to other big-time schools. Their entrance requirements were high, but they had no rule against transfer athletes. They could draw upon college graduates who happened to come within the age limit and Army, particularly, used to benefit hugely. Harry Wilson, one of West Point's brightest stars, learned his football at Penn State, and Army's equally-famed Chris Cagle came out of a Louisiana college.

Squawks Caused Army, Navy to Change Rule

But the squawks of other colleges were so loud that first Navy and later Army found it expedient to prohibit transfer athletes from playing on football varsities. Army became so conscientious about the matter, in fact, that Maryland's Bill Guckeyson, who had already entered West Point and who loomed as one of the finest football prospects in the service school's history, was prevented from participating on varsity football teams.

No particular section has had any corner on the business of subsidizing and proselyting football players, as the famous Carnegie Bulletin No. 23 revealed in a survey several years ago. The West Coast and the South, however, are known particularly as havens for lads with football ability. Pitt has not been known to be pure, either.

The fact that Notre Dame draws its football players from every point in the land is not particularly significent. Notre Dame is a natural attraction for Catholic boys with football talent who want to play on a nationally known team, especially the young scions of moneyed Catholics. A Notre Dame coach is always in a swell spot. Good football players come to him without persuasion.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Sept. 15.—The fight mob is heartily concerned about the welfare of United States Ambassador A. Drexel Biddle, but not for any reasons pertaining to diplomatic relations. Our war-tossed representative in Poland, whose house was bombed and whose family has been driven into Roumania, is an old fight manager and fancier, and the boys hope him well, as the saying goes.

CONSIDINE

It was toward the end of the golden era of sport, if we recall correctly, that Biddle became the manager of the Belgium middleweight Tene De Vos. Society, following the example of Tex Ricard's 600 millionaires, had taken up the nose-breaking business in a big way. Jock Whitney was neglecting his racing stable, searching for lean, lithe contenders, and so were a lot of other would-be patrons, but Biddle, an incorrigible fight fan, was first to take the leap.

Biddle Buys Contract

Through the good offices of Jimmy Bronson, who has the uncomfortable title of "the only honest man in boxing," Biddle bought the contract of De Vos from a fight importer named Lew Burston, who ran Jeff Dickson's road company bully-boys. De Vos was the perfect gentleman's fighter, and the first of that breed since the days when the faintly scented English bloods used to keep stables of barefisted brutes for their pleasure. Rene could wear a dinner jacket, speak a couple of languages and was a perfect fill-in in Mr. Biddle's set.

Nobody can tell to what ends the ownership of pugs by bluebloods might have progressed if it hadn't been for a tough banana-republic Negro named Angel Clivelle. Because for some time, De Vos, advancing steadily toward a middleweight championship fight by means of a series of build-up bouts at Madison Square Garden, in full view of the coming Ambassador to Poland, and his nice friends, appeared to be the ideal investment for a young sporting millionaire.

Famous Party

In honor of the champion-to-be, the future ambassador threw one of the most famed parties in the history of pugilism. It was held at the St. Regis and to it he invited not only every prominent figure in Dun and Bradstreet, but also a good half of Jacobs Beach. It has been said that just as a delegation of muffin-eared pugs waddled into the sumptuous lobby of the hotel, headed for the elevator, the night clerk hit his desk bell to attract the attention of a bell boy, and immediately the pugs squared off and boxed a full round in the lobby before they could be quieted.

Six hundred dollars worth of silverware was missing from the Biddle apartment the morning after the party. Suspicion immediately fell upon the resin crowd, who drank some $1,400 worth of champagne during the long evening.

In the intervening years, however, all the puglistic gentlemen at the party have come forth with reasonable alibis. In fact they are now sore at some of Mr. Biddle's millionaires, on whom they have fastened the blame for the departed plate. The millionaires gave the fight game a bad name, they say.

Biddle Well Liked

The boxing mob never got over liking Biddle. He used to like to sit around with the boys and listen to them gab, and once he coolly gave Mr. Bill Miller, the press agent, a check for $4,000 to publish in book form a few of Mr. Miller's 1,497,663 fight stories. The book became one of the few volumes which make an effort to immortalize the dialects and folk yore of the fight game.

The boys were grateful to their patron, and they were very sorry that night at the Garden when Angel Clivelle removed from the fight game both De Vos and his aristocratic manager, the war-torn Ambassador to Poland, with one punch on the jaw that chilled the Belgian all the way down to his hocks.

They hope him well.

Medwick's Hit Defeats Bees in 14th

Single Ends Pitcher Duel, 1-0; Leaders Beat Giants, 10-6; Lose Nightcap, 4-3

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 15.—A great hurling duel between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Boston Bees was broken up in the fourteenth inning today when Enos Slaughter doubled and Joe Medwick singled him home to give the Redbirds a 1-to-0 victory.

The triumph put the Cards 3½ games behind the league-leading Cincinnati Reds who split a doubleheader with the Giants.

Jim Turner, for the Bees, and Bob Bowan, for the Cards, hurled scoreless ball for 11 innings, before relief pitchers were called on. Lon Warneke was the winning pitcher and Johnny Lanning the loser. Turner flowed but four hits.

The Bees missed a great scoring opportunity in the seventh when Sisti singled, stole second and sprinted for the plate on Bill Wietelmann's single. The rookie Wietelmann, however, overran first and was out, Slaughter to Johnny Mize, before Sisti crossed the plate. For protesting this decision by Umpire George Barr, Manager Casey Stengel of the Bees was chased from the game.

Nats' 6 Errors Help Browns Triumph, 9-5

Ladies' Day Crowd Sees St. Louis Pound Three Pitchers for 13 Hits

By Walter Haight

I can sort of sympathize with the Nats. When I played centerfield for the "Little Potatoes, We're Hard To Peel" back in 1913, we had our off days. And I can remember some notable drubbings we took while the neighborhood belles were clustered under the tree in leftfield sissing us, instead of cheering us.

Yesterday, with beautiful women in the stands, our handsome men were on the field taking a 9-5 drubbing from the St. Louis Browns. When the "Little Potatoes" were beaten, especially by the "Sixteenth Street Ambassadors," the equivalent of the Browns in our circuit, the members of our club couldn't carry a girl's books home from school for a week. Yesterday, after making as bad a mess of a ball game as I have ever witnessed, the Nats had to fight their way to the runway while the Ladies Day gals battled for autographs. Times surely have

Ward, Billows Gain Amateur Golf Finals

Bud Beats Art Doering, 2 and 1, While Ray Defeats Schumacher, 6 and 5; Meet for National Crown Today

Chicago, Sept. 15.—Two little fellows with great big hearts—Marvin (Bud) Ward, of Spoknae, Wash., and Ray Billows, of Poughkeepsie N. Y.—tomorrow will battle over 36 holes for the forty-third National Amateur Golf Championship.

Ward with a magnificent display of courage under pressure, the high spot of the semifinals program, defeated Art Doering, of Chicago, 2 and 1, today to gain his chance at golf's highest amateur honors.

And Billows, even though he gained a comfortable 6 and 5 decision from Don Schumacher, of Dallas, Tex., also showed he had nerve—enough of it to make the final match between these two young stars shape up as a real classic of the fairways.

All Even at Thirty-third

The 23-year-old Doering gave Ward a great battle most of the way, but it was Ward's stubborn refusal to give up that furnished a dramatic climax to their duel.

Going into the thirty-third hole they were all even, with Ward apparently weakening before the young Chicagoan's rush. It was then that Ward literally "came up fighting," making a great chip shot to within 4 feet of the pin for a birdie 4 that won him the thirty-third hole and ramming down a 15-foot putt for another birdie at the thirty-fourth—and his winning margin.

Ward, who came within one stroke of tying for a playoff in this summer's National Open, fired some of the hottest golf the amateur tournament has seen on his morning round. He had a medal 67, five under part, and from the twelfth through the sixteenth holes, inclusive, he had three birdies, an eagle and one par.

Yet when they went to lunch Ward's margin was only two up.

Van Horn Gains Semifinals; Gil Hunt Loses

Coast Sensation Beats Wayn Sabin in 5 Sets; Bromwich Scores Easily

By the Associated Press

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 15.—Whoever carries the national championship off the center court at Forest Hills late Sunday afternoon, this year's tournament will go down to posterity as the one in which Welby Van Horn told the boys to move over and make room for a tennis player.

The Los Angeles sensation, barely 19, reached the semifinals today with a 4—6, 2—6, 6—4, 7—5, 6—3 victory over Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Oreg.—as splendida rally from the thin edge of defeat as a player ever contrived.

Hunt Beaten Badly

A year ago Welby came to his first national championships and won exactly one game—the one Donald Budge gave him in the third set of their match. Tomorrow he plays Jack Bromwich, of Australia, in the semifinals of his second tournament. If he doesn't get stagefright, and if he has control of his trip-hammer game, Welby might win it.

Today, Bromwich had to do little more than toss his racket on the court to beat Gilbert Hunt, jr., the Dashington (D. C.) mathematics professor, 6—3, 6—4, 6—1.

Instead of playing the attacking game at which he excels, Hunt felt like doing a batch of base lining. It was strictly no contest.

Plenty of Drama

The Van Horn-Sabin duel packed enough action and drama for one afternoon, however. For two sets the more experienced Sabin made a sucker out of his nervous opponent. With near-perfect control, he kept the ball on Welby's uncertain backhand, and Welby looked like a goner. But Welby with nothing

N.B.A. May Reach Agreement With California Body

Los Angeles, Sept. 15 (AP).—California law forbids the State athletic commission from becoming a member of the National Boxing Association but the body would like to map out some working agreement with the national organization.

The commission was advised by official opinion today the boxing law makes it illegal for it to delegate its powers to the N. B. A.

Further study was voted, however, to a possible plan whereby the commission can become a nonmember participant in N. B. A. affairs. Many States belong to the national association, but several major ones, notably New York and California, operate independently.

Yankees Win, Lack ½ Game For Pennant

Sundra, Undefeated This Year, Scores 10th Victory, Hits Double

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 15.—With Steve Sundra starring on the mound and at bat, the Yankees muzzled the Detroit Tigers, 10 to 3, today and moved within half a game of clinching their fourth consecutive American League pennant.

The chunky righthander, undefeated this season, scored his tenth triumph with six-hit hurling and in addition doubled a run home in the second inning and singled with the bases loaded for two others in the fifth.

Withall the Yankees' play was spotty. They collected 13 hits off Schoolboy Rowe, Archie McKain and Rookie Floyd Giebell, but showed the effects of their three-game losing streak as Joe Di Maggio, Bill Dickey and Babe Dahlgren all went hitless.

Joe Gordon slammed two doubles and a single and Frank Crosetti lashed out four singles to lead the Yankee offensive. Gordon also accepted 15 fielding chances flawlessly—11 assists and four putouts—to tie

Tony Scores Technical KO In 14th Rd.; Nova Is Game

20,000 Watch Bulky Barkeep Qualify for Return Louis Bout In Amazing Fashion

By the Associated Press

Municipal Stadium, Philadelphia, September 15.—In as gory and bloody a spectacle as any slaughter-house ever witnessed, pudy Tony Galento, the little fat follow who was supposed to run out of gas after 15 minutes, cut young Lou Nova down in 14 rounds tonight to qualify for another chance at Joe Louis' heavyweight championship.

With both fighters smeared with blood and his own shirt splattered from collar to waist, Referee George Blake stepped in and stopped the fight at 2 minutes 44 seconds of the fourteenth round of left-hand slugging and awarded Two-Ton Tony a technical knockout victory.

Not in the wildest nightmares had any one expected what took place tonight in this same ring in which Gene Tunney dethroned Jack Dempsey 13 years ago. The fight wasn't supposed to last more than five rounds, because either Galento's left hand bomb or Nova's cutting jabs would force a halt by then.

Blood and More Blood

Yet, for not quite 14 full rounds, the 224½-pound barkeeper from New Jersey and the 207-pound "California Kid" slugged and mauled, rushed in and clinched, but mostly they just fired left hands and watched the blood spurt.

Twice both were on the floor at the same time. From the second round on, gore virtually poured from Nova's slashed right eye. From midway of the battle, red dripped from Two-Ton Tony's gashed mouth and chin.

Then, in the fourteenth, just when it seemed a steady body bombardment had worn away his vitality, Tony suddenly leaped out with one of those round house lefts. It caught Nova on the jaw and down he went. For the second time in the fight, Tony stumbled over him and fell to the canvas at the same time. The count went to three and both got up, but it was apparent Nova was done.

Nova Still Tries

Another series of those barrel-hoop lefts hit his chin, and down he went for the count of eight. He arose, helpless. Tony charged in and threw some more lefts. As Nova, game to the finish, tried to get out of the way, Blake stepped in and ended it.

I nthe e arly going, both fought a stupid fight. Nova must have realized he had to spear Tony with straight lefts to keep the short, squat slugger away, yet it took him five rounds to find the range. Tony, on the other hand, had Nova on the verge of a knockout as early as the third round, when he floored the gallant Californian with a left hook and stumbled over him to the canvas.

They were up at the count of one, yet Tony, with Nova apparently unable to stop those lefts, swung wildly and missed, when one carefully aimed shot would have ended the fight.

Nova Comes Back Again

In the fourth, Nova displayed his marvelous recuperative powers again, just as he did against Maxie Baer last June. He came out, sparred better, and actually won the sixth and seventh rounds, although his right eye was badly cut. It was then he gean to slow Tony down with sharp righthand shots to the body.

Nova was on the floor again in the eighth. To ringsiders, it appeared he had been dropped bya left hand, but the knockdown timekeeper ruled he was either pushed or had stumbled, so he did not count, although Nova was on the canvas some four or five seconds.

Through the tenth and eleventh, Nova was stronger. Then Tony started to come on again. In the twelfth and thirteenth, he had Nova in bad shape, but it appeared the fight would go the limit, until he connected in the fourteenth.

Galento, cut to ribbons by Joe Louis last June, now will meet the Brown Bombing King of the ring again next June, provided, of course, Joe gets by Bob Pastor in Detroit next week.

Actually, Galento was ahead on points when the fight was stopped. The Associated Press score card gave him 8 of the 13 completed rounds, and he was easily on top all through the fourteenth.

The veteran Abe Feldman, 190, New York, outpointed Joe Hill, 197, Los Angeles, in the first of the six-rounders. Feldman came on in the late going, forcing Hill to miss, countering with righthand punches.

Pat Comiskey, the young Irish

FIRST ROUND

While the referee was giving the fighters their instructions, there was an argument about wiping grease from Tony's face and wiping brine from Nova's face. Nova stabbed with his left and Tony counted with two left hooks to the ear. Lou bounced half a dozen rights off Tony's stomach. Nova drove another half-dozen rights to the body and then bounced a short left hook off the face. In close they mauled. Tony was warned for using his head. Tony landed a left hook on the head. Lou drove a left to the face and right to the body. Nova's body punching did not please the squat Jerseyan. Galento landed a left to the face and took two rights in his tummy.

Nova's round.

SECOND ROUND

Nova threw a right cross to the chin. Galento bounced a hard right hook on the cheek as they fell into a clinch. Nova shot his right under the heart. Galento smashed a left hook to the face and took two straight hooks to the face. Galento rushed Nova to the ropes with a right hook to the face but Nova stuck his left out to stop Tony. They exchanged hard lefts to the jaw. Nova speared Tony twice with straight lefts. Galento landed a left to the head but Nova continued to jab Tony off balance.

Galento's round.

THIRD ROUND

Nova continued to slow Tony's rushes with straight left hands and then drove both hands to the body as Tony hit him

Field of 14 Competes Today in 6th Foxcatcher Steeplechase

The Stag 2d Favored in Jumping Test

National Anthem, Warspite, Wambaw Also Seek Prize; Three Other Races

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fair Hill, Md., Sept. 15.—The Stag II, owned by Richard K. Mellon, of Pittsburgh, Pa., shapes up as the one to beat in the sixth renewal of the Foxcatcher National Cup Steeplechase here tomorrow. The Yale blue and scarlet silks of Mellon will also be carried by Tool Box.

Richard K. Mellon's campaigner has won his last two outings in New York. His first victory this year was in the Rabel Steeplechase at Saartoga. After that race Trainer J. E. Ryan shipped the 9-year-old son of Twelve Pointer-Coral Wreath to Aqueduct. At the Long Island oval the veteran 'chaser had no trouble repeating his victory and defeating some good ones includ ing his stablemate, Tool Box.

A total of 14 has been named for the National Cup, and in the line-up are such as National Anthem, the veteran Brookmeade campaigner. This son of War Emblem appears to have regained the form he had a few years back when he was beating the best of them and winning such brush races as the Shillelah at Saratoga and others.

The Brookmead's stars return to form came in the Houdini at Saratoga a few weeks ago, when under Willie King's urging he closed plenty of ground in the final stages to gain a nose decision over Thomas Hitchcock's favored Yemasee.

Warspite Is Threat

Walter M. Jeffords' Warspite is another definite threat in the brush classic. This 'chaser, owned by the Media, Pa., sportsman, has won a number of brush races this year; his culminating victory was in the Vicmead at Delaware Park in July. Following this event Trainer Morris Dixon sent him back to his farm in Newton Square, Pa., and started to prep him for the National Cup.

Amateur rider Johnny Harrison was aboard the son of Mars-Painted Lady in his Delaware victory and this lad will no doubt be in the saddle once again on Saturday. Dixon has claimed a 10-pound allowance for the rider, however, this will probably be waived at the last minute to enable Harrison to have the mount.

Harrison has returned the victor in the last two runnings of the National Cup, aboard Campbell Weir's Solders Fate in 1937 and last year on S. A. W. Baltazzi's Ad Lib. The young rider has every chance of making it three straight this year.

The others named for the big event are C. Mahlon Kline's Our Sailor and Whaddon Chase; J. Brooks Parker's Court Time, Alvin Untermyer's Wambaw, Mrs. C. G. West's Trojan Racket, Louis Stoddard, jr.'s, Blackcock, H. E. Talbott's Big Rebel, J. E. Ryan's Another Boy, F. Ambrose Clark's Torturer and Emile Pfizer's Farndale.

Four Races Booked

The post time for the first race will be 2:45 p. m. and an excellent supporting card of three other races will be run. The opening number will be the Fair Hill Steeplechase, a 2-mile trip over the small brush course. This race has drawn 22 entries and promises to be a thrilling event.

The Big Elk, a mile and 7 furlong turf race is next on the card. This flat race has 14 in the line-up. The National Cup is third on the card and the Lewisville is the nightcap. This race is a 7-furlong jaunt over the turf and a highweight handicap affair. Racing Secretary Edward Brennan rates Mrs. Brooks Bromley's Shot Gun as the best one o fthe 20 named, for he has assigned the top weight of 162 to this son of Teddy.

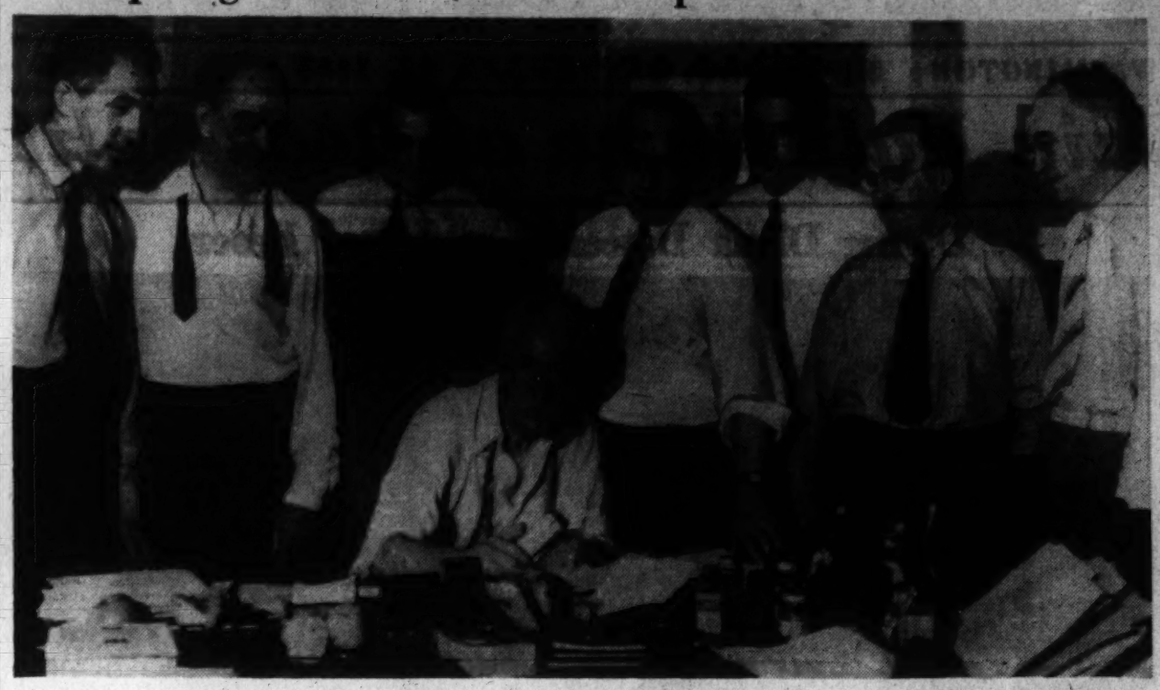
Perspiring Baseball Officials Map World Series Plans



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

It was so warm in Chicago yesterday that baseball officials meeting with Commissioner Kenesaw Landis to plan the World Series took off their coats and worked in shirt sleeves. Left to right—Ford Frick, Ed Barrow, of the Yankees; William Harridge, Warren Giles, of the Reds; William Walsingham, of the Cardinals; Charles McManus, of the Yankees, and Charles (Boots) Weber, of the Cubs. Judge Landis is seated in front

At The Post

Selections at Narragansett

Dear Al:

Hold your hats, Benningites! Will you excuse me if I report that after picking five winners on closing day at Timonium, I came back yesterday with six winners at Narragansett? I'm not goin;g into detail, just get your Post and check for yourself. And those pay-offs weren't hay, either. Well, I hope this was just a warm up for what we will do at Havre de Grace, starting Monday. While at the ball game, Thurman Cordell, "time of game" expert in the pressbox, told me an interesting story on himself and a race track. When he first came to town from the South, he knew nothing of horse racing as it is staged on the big tracks. A friend took him to Laurel and explained to him about betting two dollars. He found a name on the program he liked and walked up to a window, handed the seller a $10 bill and seceived in exchange a pasteboard ticket. "How about my change?" asked Cordell. "Take a look at that sign over this window," came back the mutuel clerk. Cordell looked and the sign read, $10 win." He looked askingly at the clerk and said, "But I only wanted to play $2." The clerk then talked to him softly, "I can see you don't know much about race tracks. Just stand over here at the side and if anybody asks for a ticket on your horse, I'll get rid of it for you." Cordell stood around, hopefull that somebody in the long line wanted "Fairway," his horse. Finally, the bell rang and Cordell was stuck with the ticket which represented all his betting money for the afternoon. So he decided he would keep the ticket and take his chances. He went up in the stands and sat down. He heard the man next to him remark that he had arrived late and found the windows closed before he could get a bet on "Fairway." Cordell remarked, "I've got a $10 ticket on that horse." The man was all attention and said, "I'd like to buy half of it." Cordell replied to the effec ha if he was stuck at all he was going to be stuck with all of it. "Then I'll give you $10 for the ticket," said the man. Cordell took the $10 and gave him the ticket. Needless to report, "Fairway" won by five and paid $61.20.

BILL.

First race—Crowning Glory has weight-carrying ability and seems headed for a set of brackets in the day's opener despite the assignment of 116 pounds. Get an inside post and has speed to go to the top. Siavka gets in comparatively light and is dangerous. Express for the show end.

Second race—Jair was scratched yesterday and finds a better spot in this field if placed in action. Needs only the right ride. On the Dot is good now and should be close. Fast Express will be hard to keep out of the money circle.

Third race—General Hay likes the route and has worked well. May be the right one in a rather open affair. Praetorian is a fair sort and should take the place. Post Office holds some chance.

Fourth race—High Pool, breaking off the rail, may make every post a winning one in this field. Chainwick is in light and probably will give the top one a battle in the closing stages. Grandeem to take care of the others.

Fifth race—The Organ Entry of High Plaid and Downy Pillow appears to have this purse at its mercy. Downy Pillow is the chief reliance of the entry but the other one has speed. Mijock should go well in this company. Five O'Five is a fair juvenile.

Sixth race—Olney, half of the Walmac Entry, may take the measure of the highly-regarded Ligaroti in the day's feature event. Olney favors the route and is in with steadying weight. Sorteado for the minor award.

Seventh race—Stephen Jay egts my call over Dark Beau in this claiming event. They carry like weights of 116 pounds. Idle Elf lacks a little of the class of the others but is a possible surprise.

Eighth race—Some Bull should go well in the day's finale. Likes the track and is fit and ready. Erin's Sun will draw a good play and is dangerous. Chamleon is favored by light weight.

Best Bet—High Pool.

President's Cup Regatta Starts Today Off Hains Point

Fair Weather Forecast for Sail Races

150 Craft Expected To Take Part in Inaugural Events; Swim Meet Also Listed

Washington's saffron-brown Potomac, her banks dressed in festival style, will be the scene of the greatest regatta ever seen in these parts this afternoon when more than 150 trim sailing craft hoist their white canvas heavenward for the opening day of the thirteenth annual President's Cup Regtaat.

Fair weather is promised for the strong flotilla of windjammers converging on the Capital from virtually all points on the Eastern seaboard and Puerto Rico. There was a warning, however, that nothing special in the way of a sailing breeze could be promised. Washington, it seems, now rests in the center of a high pressure area which will ward off any stray breezes that might seek to slip across the Virginia hills under the heading of spanking weather.

Shortly before the starting gun echoes across the river to start sailing events, Washington will be host to a strong contingent of canoeing and rowing experts in an exhibition scheduled to get under way off the west wall of Hains Point at 1 p. m.

Joe Burke, greatest oarsman of all time and holder of most national and international sculling records, will be on hand to give the more daring competitors a lesson in his specialty.

At 7:30 p. m. the regatta will move indoors for a swimming meet at the Shoreham Hotel Venetian Pool. Eastern natators and mermaids, including a handful of Olympic candidates, will run through a repertoire o feight events. Ruth Overton, queen of the regatta, will be on hand with part of her reti ue to watch local hopefuls compete. Nearly 125 entries have been received by A. Earle Weeks, chairman of the swimming division of the regatta.

Arthurd Clephane has left not a club unturned in soliciting skippers for the sailing show. Entries have been received from as far North as Connecticut and dow to the Florida Keys, in addition to two Comets from Puerto Rico.

The modern Magellans, led by the 20-foot round bottom division, will circle for position to meet a 1:30 p. m. gun, just off the tip of Hains Point. Osburn Owings and Jack s etaoinshrdletaoiemfwyphrd Zimmer, both of Washington, have been set up as prerace favorites. Thirteen classes, including one sailing canoe event, will be run off during the afternoon.

Cup winners will be decided on points covering a three-race series. Winal races in the series will be held Sunday morning and afternoon. Trophies will be presented at 7 p. m. tomorrow at Corinthian Yacht Club.

Twenty-three comets, headed by William White, of the Capial Yacht Club, and D. Verner Smythe, an erstwhile Washingtonian now living in Fairfield, Conn., will represent the largest fleet to compete.

Washington's rocking chair fleet will keep a keen eye on these entrants. Smythe is a former nationally ranking skipper in the comet ranks, while White holds the Potomac River championships along with most of the trophies offered this summer on Chesapeake Bay. They face two of the best cometers ever developed in the country, Robert Levin, who won the Oxford, Md., and Ed Merrill, last year's champion, have docked their craft at Corinthian and will seek additional laurels on the Potomac.

Local clubs will furnish the majority of contestants in the handicap classes. John Maloney, who has been roaming around the United States in recent months for the National Geographic Magazine, has returned from a Lake Champlain assignment to compete in the Class B Handicap series with his seagull, Tralee. He won the event three years ago.

Clubhouse speculation on who's who in the 20-foot restricted class will be settled with no excuses over the week-end. Judge Prentice E. Edrington, former international star class champ; "Twig" Bush and Dr. Albert Pagan, all of the Potomac fleet will cross booms. Edrington is winner of the West River series, recently concluded at Galesville, Md., while Bush won the spring series on the Potomac.

Carlton Skinner, U. S. Maritime Commission official, and a newcomer to the Potomac will attempt to take the veterans into camp when he sails the Aeolus II for the first time in local waters.

Shoreham pool will be alive with swimmers starting at 7:30. Dudley Gordon, who is assisting Weeks on the swimming committee, said last night that entries had been received from Maryland, Pennsylvania, New York and Pennsylvania.

Dottie Evans, holder of the national 100-yard free-style record, tops off a field of 25 comely mermaids into the heats and finals of her specialty. She will wear the colors of Broadwood A. C., of Philadelphia. Broadwood will make its heaviest bid for agrand slam in medals by entering seven divers in the 10-foot board test. Bill Tarbett, the D. C. champion, will head a list including Bert Williams in an attempt to keep the championship here.

Washington's colors will be in good hands in the singles canoe race. Bill Havens, Jr., recently crowned national singles champ, will end a week of strenuous training to face a field of paddlers coming from as far as Canada in the quest of the trophy silver.

Musicians Face Girl Softballers

Something new in softball is listed for tomorrow at Monument Lot No. 9, where the "Hepcats," a team of musicians from the Capitol Theater, pair off with the Arlington Aces girl team. A close game is expected, with the young ladies probably holding the edge in the betting. The Hepcats Manager Ratner, however, predicts a victory in a song. Starting time will be 10 a. m.

G. W. Football Squad Turns Out for First Practice of Season

Clemson Team Looms Strong As Last Year

Tigers Have Plenty Of Good Reserves To Fill Few Gaps

By the Associated Press

Clemson, S. C., Sept. 15.—Shorn of a few cogs—including a plunging fullback, an all-Southern end and two regular tackles—Clemson's football machine may not be quite as powerful as last year, but Tiger supporters will have to be convinced otherwise.

Few tears are being shed over the graduation of eight members of 1938's varsity, which rolled up a once defeated, once tied record.

Needs Quarterback

Even Coach Jess Neely, always silent in the past, asks only that two of his four 200-pound tackle prospects come through in order "to put a good team on the field every week-end."

Neely also is looking for a level-headed quarterback, but the general backfield situation is causing no worry. Banks McFadden, Loyell Bryant and Ed Maness have established themselves in previous seasons, and newcomers, George Floyd, James Parker, Charles Timmons, Norwood McElveen, Aubrey Rion, Ray Hunter, Clayton Cargill and George Cogswell are among others from whom Neely has to draw.

Capt. Joe Payne, a guard, has been moved behind the line as blocking back to replace injured Dan Coleman. Bru Trexler, 180-pound spinning and plunging back, is expected to take Don Willis' place at full.

Guards Appear Sturdy

Veteran Bill Hall and Sophomore Ed McLendong apparently have the inside tackle track.

Even without Payne, the guards appear steady enough with Tom Moorer and Walter Cox in the regular slots at present.

Alternate Capt. Carl Black, Wister Jackson and Walter Ckurowski, all lettermen, and Sophomore Joe Blalock, are considered tops among the ends.

Bob Sharpe has given every indication of filling Charlie Wood's shoes capably at center. Woods, who graduated, did much to make the Tiger Forward Wall well nigh impregnable last year, save on the afternoon it struck a Tennessee team too hot to handle.

Three Gopher Gridders Hurt

Minneapolis, Sept. 15 (AP).—Coach Bernie Bierman, of Minnesota, will be without the services of Bruce Smith, ace sophomore halfback from Faribault, and Jimmy Shearer, senior quarterback, for at least a week or ten days, while Gordon Paschka, senior guard, will be out for a week as a result of injuries suffered during a strenuous dummy scrimmage today.

Police Grid Leagues Are Seeking Clubs

Several berths in the Metropolitan Police Boys Club 125-pound Saturday league and 135-pound Sunday league are still open and may be had by grid clubs filling the weight requirements. All four police precincts are already signed. Carl Dunlap is handling entries at Atlantic 4791.

3,000 Redskin Fans To See Pro Opener

Capital Club Faces Eagles Baugh vs. O'Brien; Only Four Of 1938 Regulars Will Start

Three thusand Washington Fans will accompany the Redskins to Philadelphia tomorrow to watch the team in its 1939 National League debut against the Philadelphia Eagles, Redskin officials announced yesterday.

"The sale of tickets has nearly reached the 3,000 mark," stated Business Manager Jack Espey, "and at the final accounting may top that figure."

The anticipated clash of the Redskins' and Eagles' forward passing aces—Sammy Baugh and Davey O'Brien—will not be ushered in by the game's opening whistle it was revealed yesterday, when Redskin Coach Ray Flaherty revealed his starting line-up. Baugh will not take the field at the outset.

O'Brien will be in the starting line-up of the Eagles, behind a line comprised entirely of veterans of last year. At the ends will be the Eagles' two famed pass-catchers, Bill Hewitt and Joe Carter.

O'Brien and Franny Murray, former Penn star, will be the only rookies in the Eagles' starting line-up. Murray is making his debut in the pro league after a year's absence from football following his graduation from Penn, where he was one of the East's chief scoring threats. Jay Arnold and big Dave Smukler comprise the rest of the Eagles' starting backfield.

Only four regular members of last year's Redskin team will take the field when the opening whistle blows, Flaherty announced last night. The Redskin coach denies that his starting lin-eup is comprised of mere "shock troops." He declaed that "every fellow in the line-up has earned his job as a regular. We have two regular teams and we are simply withholding the club with the most veterns until such time as I think they can scor.e"

Mickey Parks, at center, and Ernie Pinckert, Don Irwin and Frank Filchock are the only veteran Redskins in the starting line-up. At the ends will be Bob Masterson and Bob McChesney, second stringers of 1938; at the tackles will be Wee Willie Wilkin and Bo Russell, a rookie from Auburn; Vick Farman, Washington State husky, and Steve Slviniski, of the University of Washington, will be at guards, with Parks at center.

Flaherty's starting backfield is equipped with three blocking specialists in Pinckert, Irwin and Wilbur Moore, the Minnesotan. Filchock will direct the Redskins' passing in the absence of Baugh, and also is expected to bear the brunt of thee running attack until Andy Farkas takes over.

When Flaherty is ready to substitute, his new backfield will be comprised of Baugh, Farkas, Jay Tuner and either Ray Morgan or Ed Justice.

Blozis, Hoya Soph, Enters N.Y.A.C. Games

Al Blozis, 6-foot-6, 240-pound Georgetown sophomore, left off football practice yesterday to catch a train for New York and tonight's annual N. Y. A. C. track meet in which he has entered shotput and discus events.

Two years ago while still a schoolboy Blozis amazed experts by winning the discus throw and placing third in the shotput in the New York games. Last year he again finished third in the shotput but is expected to better that effort tonight.

A graduate of Dickinson High School, Jersey City, Dickinson was selected on the All-America school boy track team and still holds the national shot-put record for juniors, 59 feet, 3¼ inches.

To win the shotput tonight Blozis must beat the defending champion, Francis Ryan of Columbia University.

Washington College Starts Drill Monday

Two Games Canceled Because of Conflicting Dates on Schedule

By the Associated Press

Chestertown, Md., Sept. 15.—A squad of 35 players, most of them veterans, is expected to answer Coach George Ekaitis' call Monday for Washington College's first football practice for a curtailed football schedule of seven games.

The sho'men originally scheduled nine contests, but the November 25 tilt with Western Maryland was dropped because of a conflict in dates and the November 30 game with Pennsylvania Military College was cancelled because of President Roosevelt's advance in Thanksgiving.

Graduate Manager Fred Dumschott said the revised schedule now stands like this:

October 7, Swarthmore at Swarthmore, Pa.; October 14, Johns Hopkins at Baltimore; October 21, Blue Ridge at Chestertown; October 28, Juniata at Hungtindon, Pa.; November 4, Dickinson at Carlisle, Pa.; November 11 (home coming), Mount St. Mary's at Chestertown; November 25, Delaware at Newark, Del.

G. W. Shapes Up as City's Mystery Club

Squad Bigger, Faster Than Last Year; Other Teams Are Kept Busy

By Jack Munhall.

The 1939 George Washington football team will be noticeably bigger, considerably faster and better manned than its 1938 predecessor, but what will be its success none can guess. In short, the current Colonials shape up as a squad of Gilbert Hunts, potentially great but as unpredictable as the next trend in women's hats.

At any rate, according to Coach Bill Reinhart, the affable Missourian, they will be a more colorful and spectacular outfit with plenty of spirit.

"You know," Reinhart said yesterday as he watched his charges laze in a warm sun through their first practice on the Polo Field," "I'd hate to hazard a prediction for the coming season.

"We seem to have adequate material for all positions except guard and quarterback but still there are so many uncertainties that this team could be better-than-average or considerably below standard. Again it might even develop into our best eleven since 1936.

May Shift Players

"Our success may depend greatly on the adaptibility of several kids whom I may be forced to shift from their customary positions in order to include in the regular lineup the best eleven players.

One of Reinhart's contemplated changes would check at least temporarily the career of one of G. W.'s greatest ends in history, the versatile Sam Babich, a junior. Because of a plentifulness of promising sophomore ends plus Bob Nowaskey, an all-America honorable mention in 1938, and because Babich is heady and a good ball carrier, he may be converted into a quarterback.

Other transfers which already have been effected place John Kokoski, a blocking back most of last season, 190-pound Tim Swett, a center, at guard. Kokoski, about 10 pounds heavier than last year, and just as agile and aggressive seems a natural "vest-pocket" running guard. He is squat, broad of shoulder and develops a smashing charge. Swett is a different problem. Though heavier and as speedy afoot as Kokoski, he hasn't any previous experience at the position Kokoski played several times in 1938.

Quarterbacks Lacking

The lack of promising quarterbacks is even more pronounced than last year. Without Babich, the candidates for this important spot consists of two juniors, Tom Grady and Art Nowaskey, and a pair of sophomores, Burnell Martinson and Trieste Carta, none of which has displayed marked talent.

Navy A and B Squads Go Through Stiff Scrimmage

No Casualties Among Midshipmen, Despite Pace of Early Training Grind

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 15.—The Navy football squad noted the sixth day of its practice by engaging in a real scrimmage against Frank Foster's B squad this afternoon, Head Coach Emery Lrson assembling all of his first choices who were in shape to get in the game.

The stocky, side-stepping Doc Wood progressed toward his ambition to become a triple threat in his final season by doing all the passing and a part of the punting.

The stiff pace of the early practices has caused a lot of sore muscles, though no other casualties, and Ed Gilette and Cliff Lenz, backs, and Hal Hanson, the big left end, Vic Bladin and Lou Mayo were in the backfield with Wood and Monty Whitehead. Bob Durette was at end.

The varsity was kept on the offensive most of the time, pretty well dividing the time between running and passing plays. Wood did the passing, which was rather ragged at first, but in the later stages, by no means bad. Durette, one of the best receivers on the squad, caught several passes for substantial gains, and Whitehead nabbed one for the longest gain of the day in this line.

Nats to Play Tigers In Ball Game for Stricken Outfielder

Arch McDonald, former maestro of Washington microphones, will be imported from New York to officiate as master of ceremonies at the "Johnny Stone Day" at Griffith Stadium on Sunday, Clark Griffith announced yesterday.

McDonald, currenly broadcasting all games at Yankee Stadium and the Polo Grounds, will take leave of absence to make the trip here. For five years McDonald recounted the exploits of Stone in broadcasts of Washington games over Station WJSV.

"ohnny Stone Day" will be celebrated by a doubleheader on Sunday with the Nats and the Detroit Tigers meeting in the featured performance. Preliminary to that game the National Amateur Baseball Federation will present the two tourney finalists in a championship game starting at 1:30 p. m.

Washington and Detroit clubs have secured the financial success of "Stone Day" with a promise to donate to Stone $3,400, a sum which will pay the mortgage on his Tennessee farm. Groups of Washington fans will also present Stone with sums which will fatten his proceeds.

ARCH McDONALD

Double-Price Seats In Special Section Will Boost Proceeds

Stone, who was forced to retire from big-league baseball early last season and has been seeking health cures at various sanatariums, will come to Washington from his present home at Asheville, N. C.

Washington Club officials yesterday requested that fans be advised that box seats have not been sold out for "Stone Day," despite published reports to that effect.

A special "Johnny Stone section" of box seats, for which fans are paying double price, half of which will go to the stricken outfielder, has been reserved. The special seats are on sale at the Fashion Shop, Thirteenth atnd F streets, the Sports Center, Eighth atnd D streets northwest, and at the office of Dr. William I. Ogus, "Stone Day" committee chairman.

High School Grid Series Is Promising

New System in Effect; Central Eleven Strong; Gonzaga Ready

By Bill Burnett

If the schoolboy brand of football in Washington isn't the best in the country this year, at least it will be the most hotly contested, an early survey of the local squads reveals.

And because of their organization, the annual grid series between the seven public high schools should be the hotest of all. For the first time since there were enough clubs to warrant a championship series, the schools will be divided into two divisions—much as the National Professional League—and a clash at the end of the season will be staged to decide the intersectional champion.

Traditional Rivalry

Interest of the old grads will not end with public school games however. One traditional rivalry, the St. John's-Ganzaga get-together on November 12, should draw 20,000 to Griffith Stadium, just as last year, and the Devitt-Bullis affair later in the season might approach it for downright thrilling action. St. Alban's Friends and Landon will again compete in the Interstate Academic Conference, as well as in local games outside the league. In addition, such clubs in the vicinity of the city as Georgetown Prep, Episcopal High, Washington-Lee and George Washington will be heard from before final won-and-lost records are complete.

A shift in the type of series has not caused interhigh coaches to slacken drills, confident of a successful and interesting season. If anything it has made them more demanding of their charges. After a week of calesthenics, the boys are going through light scrimmages, and their dummy work lasts several hours a day.

Intense Preparation

At Eastern the preparation is particularly intense. Mike Kelly is taking over the reigns following Artie Boyd's transfer to Roosevelt, and the enviously eyes the title the White Tide won in 1937 and lost back to Central last season.

With the aid of Phil Fox, a recent addition to the staff, Kelly has a group of 60 lads working with midseason fervor every afternoon. Listed among his star candidates for backfield berths are Veterans Ray Soo, Francis Hallama, Paul Cohill and Jack Teague.

Except for a native reticence, Coach Hardy Pearce would say outright that he expects to repeat Central's '38 series victory again this year.

Almost the same backfield—the only loss was Tony Di Blasi—that ran up three touchdowns on the first three plays of the Tech game last year, is back. Wings Dick Farr and Sam Di Blasi have also returned, though the pivot post is woefully weak as far as experience is concerned.

Two Good Ends

What Boyd will do with his Roosevelt charges should be highly entertaining. In 20 years of interhigh football, the Riders have won exactly three games, and that sort of thing doesn't sit well with the former Maryland star. He's got a couple of prize ends, Danny Doothe and Dick Metzler, from last season as a nucleus for what he hopes will be Roosevelt's all-time best time.

Tech will be the dark horse. Coach "Rusty" Thompson undoubtedly has revenge for the revenge for the shellacking administered by Central uppermost in his mind. The team will probably rank next to, or maybe above, Central in strength.

The three other interhigh clubs—Western, Wilson and Anacostia—could surprise everyone by winning the flag, but they probably won't. Coach Carl Heintel, of Wilson, admits to only one letterman, End Herman Byer, though Ray Banello came along fast at the end of last season. Western has at least four scintillating backs on its squad, but Coach Dan Ahern would gladly trade half of them for a good guard. His line, except for Jack Neam, graduated in a body in June.

Though Anacostia pulled two rousing upsets in its first year of competition—over Roosevelt and Tech—it doesn't figure to do as well again.

Coach Gene Augusterfer, of St. John's, puts most of his hopes in Frank Cady, a 1901pound halfback, and in an experienced line. Gonzaga's Coach Orrel Mitchell also has a better than average line, at least at first glance. Most of his backs will be picked from a group of promising youngsters.

Exhibitions To Feature Sunday Golf

Dettweiler, Doerer Paired at Anacostia; Club Titles at Stake

Two exhibition matches, at Army and Navy and East Potomac, co-feature one of the heaviest Sunday team matches and other team affairs championships, Maryland State golf cards here in years, with club dotting the program.

Helen Dettweiler, back from a two-month tour of the East, her first professional venture, will play at Anacostia with Tommy Doerer, jr., as a partner against Mel Shorey, East Potomac mentor, and a partner to be named. It will be Doerer's first exhibition since turning pro.

Allan Burton, Army and Navy mentor, has lined up a match at the Service Club in which he will play with Al Houghton as a partner against Leo Walper and Robert T. Barnett, Chevy Chase pro, at 1:30 p. m.

East Potomac's muny golf team will entertain the Lancaster, Pa., publinks team, undefeated for three years, while Anacostia will send a representation to Richmond for a return tilt with the Laurel Club of that city.

The Maryland State Golf Association team matches will interfere with the championship flights of the club tourneys, with the finals on scheduled at Kenwood and Beaver Dam, the second round at Capital, Argyle and Belle Haven, first round at Indian Spring and qualifying at Manor, Army and Navy and Woodmont.

Women's title tourneys will find the first round of match play at Argyle and Beaver Dam, while Monday will find the start of "Women's Club championship week" at eight clubs, Manor, Indian Spring, Columbia, Washington, Army and Navy, Congressional, Woodmont and Kenwood.

Louis Pronounced Physically Fit To Meet Pastor

Detroit, Sept. 15 (AP).—Except for a slight throat irritation, Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis was reported physically fit tonight and ready to defend his title against Bob Pastor here Wednesday night.

Because of a slight head cold, Dr. Chester Ames, the Brown Bomber's psysician, ordered him to rest today and tomorrow. Louis will spar Sunday and oMnday to bring his long training campaign to an end.

Pastor already has ended strenuous workouts and is conserving his energy for the scheduled 20-round engagement. He expects to enter the ring weighing around 187, 13 pounds less than the mark Louis wants to make. Louis weighed 204 today.

John J. Hettche, chairman of the Michigan Boxing Commission, said he considered a postponement extremely unlikely, adding that he had received on word from the Louis camp that the champion might not be ready to go.

D. C. Bankers To Figure in A. B. A. Parley

Many Here Plan to Attend Sessions In Seattle

By Thomas M. Cahill.

At the annual convention of the American Bankers Association, at Seattle, September 25-28, Washington will be represented not only by Federal officials and officers of the association's office here, but also by local bankers.

Among the Federal speakers will be Senator Pat Harrison, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and Preston Delano, comptroller of the currency. From the A. B. A. office here will go D. J. Needham, general counsel, and J. O. Brott, assistant counsel.

Washington has three members on the executive council of the A. B. A.: Wilmer J. Waller, vice president and cashier of Hamilton National Bank, who has been selected by the District of Columbia Bankers' Association as its representative on the council; Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank, a former president of the A. B. A., and George O. Vass, vice president and cashier of Riggs National Bank, who has been appointed by President Philip A. Benson of the A. B. A. as a member-at-large of the executive council.

Mr. Waller is State chairman for the District of Columbia on the State legislative council, A. B. A.; chairman of the National Bank division committee on relations with Federal agencies; member of that division's Federal legislation committee and member of the division's committee on trust departments.

Francis G. Addison, jr., president of Security Savings & Commercial Bank, is a member of the executive committee of the State Bank Division, A. B. A., and a member of this division's committee on Federal legislation. He is also a member of a special committee to study and report on a uniform retirement and pension plan for banks. Other members of this committee are; Norman Hayes, of Philadelphia, and Millard Jones, of Rocky Mount, N. C.

Sidney F. Taliaferro, vice president and trust officer of Riggs National Bank, is a member of the executive committee of the trust division, A. B. A., and chairman of the Federal legislation committee for that division.

New Insurance Firm

Lewis A. Payne, for the last 18 years a partner of Ralph W. Lee & Co., insurance firm, announces the dissolution of that company through mutual consent of himself and Ralph W. Lee, sr., and the formation of a new insurance firm to be known as Lewis A. Payne & Co., with offices in the Investment Buliding.

In forming his new company, Mr. Payne states that a number of his associates will accompany him. These include David H. King, Mrs. P. Evelyn Oliver, Miss Virginia C. Busch, Miss Marie O'Connor, Miss Dorothy Wickline and Mrs. Mary M. McConnell.

Born at Allen Fresh, Charles County, Md., Mr. Payne came to Washington at the age of 4. Graduating from St. John's College in 1904, he took his first position with John F. Donohoe & Sons, real estate firm. After 15 months with this office he went to Tyler & Rutherford, Inc., and in 1906 became connected with Ralph W. Lee in the insurance business. After 15 years he was taken in as a partner and has remained with that company until now.

Bank Dividend Voted.

Directors of Columbia National Bank at their meeting this week declared a dividend of $3 a share, as follows: $1.50 a share to stockholders of record September 23, 1939, payable October 2, 1939; $1.54 a share to stockholders of record December 23, 1939, payable January 2, 1940.

Thomas P. Morgan, jr., local manager of the Mutual Life Insurance Co., of New York, announces appointment of John B. Cleland, jr., as his assistant and agency organizer.

Mr. Cleland holds a chartered life underwriter's degree, which he was awarded in 1937. At the present time he is secretary-treasurer of the local C. L. U. chapter. He was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1925 and resigned from the Navy in 1928.

He entered life insurance business with the Life Insurance Co. of Virginia, at Washington, in October, 1929, and and joined the Crowley & Marr agency of the Penn Mutual Co. in January, 1932.

For a number of years Mr. Cleland has been one of the leading personal producers for the Penn Mutual General Agents Association as one of the five agents of that company throughout the country to receive a master leadership award.

Life Insurance Sales in August Show 6.1% Rise

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—An increase of 6.1 per cent in the amount of new life insurance written in August, compared with August, 1938, was reported today by the Association of Life Insurance Presidents, an organization representing 40 companies with 82 per cent of the total legal reserve life insurance outstanding.

The new business written in August was $584,595,000 compared with $550,960,000 in the previous August.

New Business in the first eight months of this year totaled $4,921,282,000, an increase of 3.3 per cent over the $4,764,181,000 in the like 1938 period.

Wholesale Prices Show Record Leap Of 4.1% in Week

The Labor Department's index of wholesale commodity prices rose 4.1 per cent during the week ending September 9 in the wake of the European war, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported yesterday.

The rise in the index was described as the greatest for any one week since the index was established in 1932.

The bureau said sharp price advances were reported for most export and import commodities such as grains, meats, raw sugar, raw silk, crude rubber and nonferrous metals.

The bureau pointed out that foods and farm products showed a gain of nearly 9 per cent over the preceding week.

U. S. Baby Bond Sales Increase

The Treasury said yesterday it sold $19,421,145 worth of United States (baby) savings bonds in the first 12 days of the month, despite heavy selling of the big Government bonds on the open market after the European war broke out.

Sales in the 12 days were $5,200,000 more than in the same period last year.

Officials generally ascribe the heavy market selling of the regular Government bonds in recent days to the efforts of some banks to cash in on profits of bonds bought at lower prices and also to the effort of some investors to transfer their cash into common stocks and commodities on which they saw a chance to make larger profits out of the war boom than they could on Government bonds, which uniformally bear low interest rates.

Wheat Prices Mixed; Close Shade Lower

Market Unsettled By Hedging and Short Covering

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 15.—Wheat trading today was a mixture of hedging, profit taking and short covering that unsettled the market and kept prices fluctuating nervously. The close was a shade lower than yesterday.

New purchasing was on a small scale but was strong enough to give the market an opening upward push and then prices rallied sharply after a midsession slump. Hedging by commercial interests acquiring wheat and flour lowered quotations as much as 1¼ cents below yesterday's close at one stage, while buying encouraged by reports of unfavorable moisture conditions in the winter wheat belt helped to establish net overnight gains of ⅞ to 1⅜ around noon.

Wheat closed unchanged to ⅝ cent lower compared with yesterday's finish, December 86⅝-⅞, May 88-87⅞; corn unchanged to ⅜ higher, December 57¾-⅞, May 60⅝-¾; oats unchanged to ⅜ lower; rye ⅜-½ down; and lard 5-13 higher.

Absence of demand for U. S. wheat in export circles, due partly to the war, which has disrupted private trade and caused temporary withdrawal of the subsidy, was Exporters confirmed sales of 750,000 bushels of Canadian wheat and some American winter in store in Europe while estimates of Canadian export wheat and flour business yesterday and today ran as high as 2,000,000 bushels.

Lamson Bros. & Co., commission house, received a report from experts who have studied the Kansas moisture situation indicating that heavy rains are needed to start the winter wheat crop.

Corn prices fluctuated within a range of about 1¾ cents, being as much as a cent net higher at times. Receipts exceeded 400 cars, but much of this grain filled recent purchases while some was believed to have been loan corn. Industries were good buyers and there were fears that hot, dry weather may damage some late corn. The country continued to sell a liberal quantity, however, with bookings to arrive totaling 300,000 bushels.

No additional export sales were reported. Traders pointed out that although Argentine corn is selling below U. S. grain, the shorter water route to Europe may make Northern hemisphere corn more attractive in war time.

Oats and rye followed the trend of corn and wheat most of the day.

Stocks Irregularly Higher in Lightest Deals Since War Started; Foreign Exchange Slumps; Bonds Quiet and Uneven

New York, Sept. 15.—Factors of larger import than religious holidays were woven into the stock market pattern today and slowed trading from its recent gallop to more leisurely progress. Transactions of 1,594,700 shares on the Big Board were the smallest since the war fever hit Wall Street. Other than the rail equipments and merchandising groups share prices were irregular, the list closing with a small net gain.

Foreign exchange dealings mirrored nervousness over new and disturbing events on the other side of the Atlantic and in the Far East. Sterling broke to a new low at $3.75 but recovered to $3.87, off 2 cents. The Canadian dollar was at a discount of slightly more than 10 per cent in New York. French francs, at a new low of 2.14 cents closed at 2.19 cents, off 4 points. Swiss and Scandanavian funds firmed.

Bonds Irregular

Listed bonds were quiet and irregular, high grade investment issues showing a better tone, while speculative bonds were uncertain. United States Treasury issues met a good market, gains being reported in all divisions, making official support needless for the time being. The foreign dollar section remained weak. Among speculative domestic issues gains and losses were about equally numerous. Turnover amounted to $9,350,000, which is the smallest for a full session since the European war began.

Overnight news while tending to confirm the general expectations of neutrality act repeal to permit shipments of wartime materials to belligerents, also implanted the idea that profits will be on no such high plane as enthusiastic Wall street analysts have been predicting. It is further indicated that industrial leaders as well as the Government are out to nip profiteering in the bud. Steel, chemical, rayon and several other industries already have taken steps to insure orderly markets, as free as possible from speculation.

On foreign fronts the news grist, accompanied by the usual crop of rumors, was calculated to make thoughtful persons dubious about how much benefit the new world war will be to American economy. Complete disruption of peacetime trade already is indicated, in the opinion of commentators.

Steels in Demand

Steels were in demand at the opening as some of the analysts interpreted the unchanged fourth-quarter product prices as bullish to domestic consuming industries. Buying in the group, however succumbed to profit taking and they were only moderately ahead at the finish. Steel common, at the top of the list, was ⅜ net higher on turnover of 31,200 shares. Bethlehem eased a minor fraction.

Coppers, while active, did not go far. The British announcement of blocked-sterling payment for metal produced by non-mexx empire countries doubtless accounted for a little selling in his section. International Nickel, an active issue, was down more than a point. Anaconda eased ¼ and Kennecott ⅜.

Although volume in shares made a poor showing against totals of previous days, it was a broad session in the sense that no less than 896 issues were traded. There was the usual wide movements in stocks with a thin position and in some of the odd lot deals fluctuations of 2 to 4 points were not unusual. In the "war baby" department, profits were taken in Du Pont, which was down 2¾. Eastman Kodak was up more than 2 and gains of nearly as much were recorded by Johns-Mansville, Loew's, American Smelting and Allied Chemical. On the other hand, Union Carbide and Proctor & Gamble were off more than a point each.

Commodities Are Off

In New York commodity markets minor losses were registered in cocoa and copper. Mixed tendencies prevailed in sugar, rubber and hides. Silk rose the 15-point limit on strength of Japanese markets.

Gains in Treasury bonds heartened dealers and the large institutional holders, for they reflected some independent buying. Long-term bonds were up by 2-32 to 11-32 point. Persistent inquiry continued in the short-term issues, partly because the Treasury wisely refrained at this time from increasing the offering of discount bills. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations were in quiet demand.

Sizable blocks of best rated corporation bonds were turned over, usually at advances of small fractions. Telephone bonds, power and light issues, leading rails and industrials also were in demand.

Medium-priced railroad bonds were mixed, as some profit-taking developed at the better levels occasioned by a week of advances. Some issues still tended toward improvement, but most bonds drifted lower. Borderline rails were in greater demand. Alleghany Corporation issues did well, owing to special developments, and utility holding bonds improved slightly, but convertibles were mixed. The communications issues resumed the advance.

In the foreign section Polish bonds fell 11 to 17 points, and German issues also continued their readjustment to outright default levels. A few French 7½s were turned over at a loss of 4 points, but Australian and Canadian issues developed a better tone. European neutral bonds still were on the downward slide, while issues of the Latin-American countries were mostly easier.

Closing Reaction Sends Cotton List 2 to 9 Points Off

New York, Sept. 15 (AP).—After irregularity cotton futures dipped near today's close to finish 2 to 9 points lower. Mostly business consisted of price fixing for trade accounts which offset somewhat enlarged hedge selling.

Strength in foreign markets prompted Liverpool and Bombay buying at the outset. Initial advances of 3 to 10 points were soon pared by New Orleans selling and scattered liquidation. However, persistent trade support served to hold near months around previous closing levels.

Sterling's sharp drop caused another buying and covering movement in Liverpool, sending prices to maximum permissible advances of 25 points. New Orleans closed 1 higher to 11 lower as distant positions lost ground.

U. S. Aircraft Capacity Seen 5,000 a Month

Peak capacity which United States aircraft manufacturers could reach in a year's time is 5,000 planes a month, while under war conditions Great Britain (including Canada) and France combined could build 3,500 a month, Germany about 2,500 a month and Russia about 1,000 a month, a survey by the United States News shows.

U. S. Is Shipped $129,921,831 of 'Refugee' Gold

By the Associated Press

Gold imports leaped to a total of $129,921,831 in the first week of the European war.

The Commerce Department said yesterday that this figure, which was the highest in several weeks and was due largely to the rush of foreigners to get their wealth into safekeeping, was $23,000,000 above that of the preceding week.

Shipments included $116,885,226 from England alone. Since then both England and France have clapped rigid control over both gold and currency transactions on their financial centers. Other gold reaching here in the week ended September 8 came from Canada, $5,877,198, and Australia, $5,473,737.

Col. Ayres Sees Price Drop for Prime Bonds

Investment Sentiment, He Says, Is Now Turning Toward Stocks

Cleveland, Sept. 15.—"One of the important but undramatic results of the outbreak of war will probably prove to be the downturn in the price trends of high grade bonds," Says Col. Leonard P. Ayres today in the bulletin of the Cleveland Trust Co., of which he is vice president. He adds: "During recent years bond prices have been persistently rising until they reached in this past summer new high levels for all time. They were pushed upward by investors seeking safety for their funds, by regulations which confined bank investments to restricted groups of issues, and by a shortage of other desirable loans and securities. Now that the price trends have turned downward, they are likely to continue for a long period.

"In the past, long-term trends of bond prices have persisted for as long as 20 to 30 years, and when they have made downturns they have done so for one of two reasons. Trends of bond prices turned downward either because competing forms of investment appeared to offer greater advantages or because the prices of bonds mounted so high, and the returns from them became so small, that investors preferred to hold liquid funds idle rather than to risk the future shrinkages which appeared to be involved in bond investments. This downturn has resulted from a combination of both of those influences.

"Now that war has begun investment sentiment has turned to the idea that stocks may continue to advance in price and to pay greater dividends, and that commercial loans may increase in volume. Such influences have turned the long-term trends of high grade bond prices downward. Nevertheless conservative individual and institutional investors may be well advised to retain their high grade bonds since the only alternatives are more speculative.

"Meanwhile, as long as these sentiments prevail, the prices of many lower grade bonds will advance while those of the highest grades will decline. We are in the process of undoing a specialized form of inflation which has dominated bond markets. Banks will almost surely have to forego important book profits which have accrued on their holdings of Government securities, but while they will regret that development it will not disturb them. We are now leaving an era dominated by managed economics, and entering one controlled by the more potent influences of war."

2 Companies Receive Army Plane Orders

Army aircraft contracts totaling $6,317,000 were awarded tentatively yesterday to two companies for an undisclosed number of single-engine interceptor type planes. The Seversky Aircraft Corporation of Farmingdale, N. Y., received a contract for approximately $3,478,000 and the Bell Aircraft Corporation of Buffalo, N. Y., a contract for $2,839,000.

Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, announced that those two companies along with the Curtiss aeroplane division of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation of Buffalo, N. Y., won the design competition for airplanes of that type submitted in connection with the opening of competitive bids at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio.

Jones Wins 'Golden Putter'

Sharkey's 74 Takes Second At Kenwood

Two Tie in Women's Play; George Vass, Wilson High Golfer, Wins Hole-in-One

Victor Jones, GAO employe and a member of the winning quartet in the Federal golf tea mchampionships, topped a field of 138 for the "Golden Putter" in Gordon Hittenmark's second annual Radio Open yesterday at Kenwood.

Jones played the nines in 36 and 37 to top a field that included several of the top amateurs in the city. His score was a stroke better than Buddy Sharkey, two-time Indian Spring Club champion and Georgetown University sophomore, who won a new suit for his 74, that topped a like score by Ralph Bogart in the draw. Billy Shea, Georgetown senior, also had a 74, but figured in the hole-in-one prizes.

Two-Way Tie

The Women's play ended in a two-way tie at 81 between the perennial rivals, Marion Brown, Manor, and Mrs. Betty Meckley, Indian Spring, who will play off for the trophy at a later date.

The hole-in-one contest was won by George Vass, young host club golfer and a member of the Wilson High team, with a shot 2 feet 7 inches from the cup from a short tee on the eight hole. But Arthur Carroll, playing his third round of the day, dropped a brassie shot from the regular tee, 225 yards away, on the same hole, for a real ace, but it didn't count except for the routine hole-in-one awards.

Carroll's shot landed on the front edge of the green and trickled into the hole, while playing with Sam Del Vecchio, Fred Stickle and Fred Weaver. It wasn't the only eagle of the day, however, as Maury Nee dropped his second shot on the fourth hole for an eagle deuce.

Mrs. M. A. Miller, Kenwood, won low net for the host club members with 102-21—81, and is the proud possessor of a radio, while Mrs. A. D. Kane was second, 104-20—84. Prize winners among the men of the host club were Tom Powers, 81-17—64, and D. J. Gaffney, 79-14—65.

Other winners among the amateurs included Volney Burnett, Andy Oliveri and Bob Peebles, in that order with five over par 75's. Pat Martino and Maury Nee completed the prize list in that division with 76's.

Trailing Vass in the hole-in-one competition was Carroll, who placed his tee shot 3 feet 1 inch from the cup on the same hole he later made an ace, while Billy She was 3 feet 2 inches away, and Bob Ruane, Don Miller and E. E. Stevens trailed in that order for the other awards.

Other Prizes

Other prizes included the NBC trophy to John Dodge, with an 84, while Charles Murray had the highest strokes on the thirteenth, a 10, and A. E. Johnson high gross for the day, 102. Bob Raiford won the set of clubs, with ticket No. 13 in the raffle.

Low net in the women's play went to Mrs. A. A. McEntee, former champion from the host club, with 89-11—78. Mrs. J. W. Godfrey, Beaver Dam, was second with 88-8—80; Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor, next with 86-6—80, and Mrs. R. E. Joyce, of Kenwood, third in the 80 draw with 100-20.

Four members of the Washington Redskins and 20 Roxyettes from the Capital Theater were on hand for the presentation ceremonies on the first tee.—WHITTLESEY.

Man of the Month

By Walter Johnson.

WJSV Staff Baseball Announcer

(Following each game by the Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

Four Nats figure in the latest distribution of points in the Man of the Month contest. Welaj, Vernon, Wright and Krakauskas figured best yesterday.

To Mickey Vernon, four points, for his pair of doubles, his two runs and his one run driven in. He also fielded in bang-up style.

To Johnny Welaj, three points, for his brilliant running catch of Hoag's drive in the sixth, which halted an unrising of the Browns.

To Taft Wright, two points, for his pair of singles and good work afield.

Doering gamely winning the seventeenth and ending the round with a three-under-par 69. Going out in the afternoon, Ward's game had him scrambling all over the course. He won the twenty-second to go three up for a second time, getting a part with a nice chip shot after his second was trapped. Doering won the twenty-fourth with a birdie as Ward again encountered trap trouble, Ward clinging to his two-hole margin through the twenty-seventh.

A shot into a bunker cost Ward the twenty-eighth and, after a halve at the next hole, Doering squared the battle with a birdie four on the long thirtieth, making a great third shot out of the rough to within three feet of the pin.

Two halved holes followed before Ward "turned it on," getting his two consecutive birdies as Doering dubbed one shot completely on the thirty-third and on the thirty-fourth missing a 20-foot putt that would have given him a halve and brighter chances to recover.

The thirty-fifth was halved in fours, ending the duel.

Starts With Rush

Billows, who at 25 is one year Ward's junior, started with an amazing rush, winning the first six holes against the Texas star. And it was not until the seventeenth that Schumacher could win a hole, taking it with a par 4 to Billows' bogie 5. But the New Yorker won the eighteenth to go to lunch with an eight-hole lead.

Going out in the afternoon, Schumacher won the twentieth with an 8-foot putt for a birdie only to see Billows get the hole back with a birdie deuce at the twenty-first. A 40-foot chip shot that dropped for a birdie gave Schumacher the twenty-third, but he bogied and lost the next hole and at the turn Billows still was 7 up.

Schumacher had trap trouble and lost the twenty-eighth, then came back with a rush to win the next two holes with birdies. But Billows refused to "crack," getting a par 3 for a half that ended the match on the thirty1first green.

Billows, as compared to Ward's 5 under par for the day, was one over regulation figures against Schumacher. Ward's victory today evened his match play score with Doering, who put the Spokane star out of the 1938 National Amateur in the opening rounds.

Galento Wins By Technical K.O. Over Nova

prospect from Paterson, N. J., added another to his long strong of right-hand knockouts by putting the crusher on Karl Johnsen, 191, New York, in 2 minutes, 16 seconds of the first round of a six-rounder.

Comiskey, who scaled 020, bided his time until he found the first opening for his smashing right hook. When the opening came, he pitched and Joynsen went down and out, his head bouncing with a sharp crack as it hit the canvas.

Dan Hassett, Philadelphia, sparring partner for Nova, won a four-round decision over Jim McVey, Negro heavy from Chester, Pa. Hassett weighed 196 pounds, McVey 185½.

The first bout was won by Ben Moroz, a huge 274-pound local boy, who flattened Bill Kettle 214½, New York, in 2 minutes 10 seconds of the fourth round.

The second fight also wound up in a hurry when Main Daniels, 192½, Washington, knocked out George Kostalac, 214½, Harrisburg, Pa., in the second round of a four-rounder. Daniels dropped the Pennsylvanian once for a nine-count in the second round and put him to sleep a few moments later with a right to the face.

Galento got inside Nova's guard with a short left hook to the jaw. Tony opened a small cut on Lou's right eye with a left hook but took both hands to the body again. Galento dropped Nova with a left hook then fell on top of him. They were both up with no count. Nova was badly hurt and Tony hit him with three more lefts. Nova tried to hold but was badly hurt at the bell.

Galento's round.

After the round Timekeeper Cervino announced that he had counted one over the fighters before they arose from the floor.

FOURTH ROUND

Nova still seemed hurt as he came out and was staggered with two smashing lefts to the head. Blood dripped from his right eye. Tony however missed with two lefts and Lou regained some strength. Nova did his best to keep Tony off by throwing both hands to the body. Tony again staggered Nova with a left hook. Nova held on as another left and a right bounced off his cheeks. Nova countered a left hand with a dozen punches from both fists to the body. Galento cracked Nova on the chin with a right. They bounced lefts off their faces at the bell.

Galento's round.

FIFTH ROUND

Nova appeared somewhat stronger. Galento smashed a left to the face and another to the body as Nova drilled right hands to the midsection. Nova found the mark with his right to the face. Nova's knees buckled as Galento cracked him with a left hook. Nova hit Tony with lefts and rights five times on the face.

SIXTH ROUND

Galento shot a right over the ear then hit Nova's sore eye with a left. He repeated the left and Nova's eye was bleeding again. Galento threw two lefts and took two rights under the heart.

Nova straightened Tony up with a short right. Again Galento stepped in with his left to the eye. Nova threw three short rights to the body. Nova continued to belt away with rights to the body.

Nova's round.

SEVENTH ROUND

Nova had recovered marvelously. Lou continued to pitch at the body with rights and Galento landed a left hook high on the head. Galento smashed his left to the nose. They were doing considerable clinching. Galento scored with a long left again. The eye again, then another left hook hurt Nova and he held momentarily. Lou threw three punches to the body then scored with another left. Galento's left opened the cut over Nova's eye again.

Nova's round.

EIGHTH ROUND

Both appeared very tired. Galento landed a left to the chin, but Nova stopped his rush short with a hard right to the face. A left hook floored Nova. He was up with no count as the timekeeper ruled it was no knockdown, but a push.

Nova stumbled to one knee with a short left, but was up immediately. Galento threw two more lefts to the face as Nova held on, his eye badly cut again. Galento was too anxious and missed a left, but came right back with another which drew more blood from Nova's right eye. A straight opened a cut under Galento's mouth at the bell.

Galento's round.

NINTH ROUND

Each shot a hard left to the face. A short left reopened the cut on Galento's mouth. Galento straightened Lou with a short left inside to the face. Nova, in close, threw four rights to the body. Galento threw two fearful rights to the eye. Both were well covered with blood. Again Nova fired a series of rights to the body. Galento shot a short right to the face and Nova staggered. The faces of both were covered with blood and the referee looked like a butcher behind his counter. They were mauling away at the bell.

Galento's round.

TENTH ROUND

Nova speared Tony with a left to the face, then bounced five rights off the tummy. Galento fired two lefts to the jaw. A straight left staggered Nova, but he came back with four straight lefts to the face that Galento did not like at all.

Nova slipped in water in his own corner, but was up with no count. The action was considerably slower. Galento drove a left to the pit of the stomach, but took a right to the face in return. They traded lefts and again the blood slipped from Nova's eye and Tony's lacerated mouth at the bell.

Nova's round.

ELEVENTH ROUND

Nova now was cut on both eyes, his left eye apparently having been opened late in the tenth round. Galento shot a left to Nova's body, as both slowed down to a walk. Galento shot a left to the bad right eye and took a short right to the mouth. Galento was warned by the referee for heeling. Galento cracked Lou three times to the face, but Lou's body punches slowed his attack. A short left hand clicked on Nova's jaw at the bell.

Round even.

TWELFTH ROUND

Galento shot a hard left to the body and then ran into a straight left. Galento fired three hard rights to the body and Nova countered with a straight left to the face and a couple of rights downstairs.

Galento threw a right to the face. Nova's straight left caught Tony on the mouth, then Galento threw a left to the face. Both were very tired and they mauled in close. They then shot long lefts. Galento shook Nova with a right to the chin, but Nova caught Tony twice with rights to the chin.

Galento's round.

THIRTEENTH ROUND

Galento threw a right to the chin. Galento threw a left to the chin, but was speared with three straight lefts to the body. Nova bounced three short lefts off the chin. A left to the jaw staggered Nova. Galento again landed a right on the chin and Nova held on. Galento bounced a straight left off the face at the bell.

Galento's round.

FOURTEENTH ROUND

Galento floored Nova with a left hand then stumbling over him and fell to the floor himself. They were up at the count of three. Galento floored Nova with a left hook for a count of eight and Nova appeared helpless, although he held on.

Galento threw two more left hooks to the head and Referee Blake stepped in to stop the contest giving Galento the victory on a technical knockout at 2 minutes 44 seconds of the round.

changed. Our "Little Potatoes" were born too soon.

I saw more boots at Griffith Stadium yesterday than I see around a race track. Six juicy errors found there way into the Nats' side of the boxscore and there were a number of border-line cases unrecorded due to technicalities. With few exceptions, the Browns' runs were traceable to either errors or bases on balls. However, they found time to get to the slants of Krakauskas, Appleton and Alexander for 13 assorted hits.

Nats Get Eight Hits

The Nats were held to eight hits, seven off Vernon Kennedy, who was forced to retire in the ninth inning when he twisted his ankle while running to first base. General Mills staggered through the Nats' half of the final frame. In only one inning, the second, were the Nats able to get more than one hit and it was in this frame they scored two runs.

Aderholt, the rookie from Charlotte, beat out an infield hit to start the Nats to a 2-0 lead in the second. Vernon walked and Aderholt scored on Evans' honest poke to rightfield. While the Browns were performing double-play magic on Krakauskas, Vernon scored the second run of the frame.

A single by Christman, a sacrifice and Heffner's single through Travis (which the "Little Potato" scorekeeper would have made an error) gave the Browns run No. 1 in the third inning. St. Louis scored again in the fourth without making a hit. Two bases on balls, a double steal and an infield out turning the trick.

Travis Boots One

Vernon's double, a passed ball and a fielder's choice accounted for the Nats' third run in the fourth inning, but in the fifth the Browns went ahead for keeps. With one out, Travis booted Kennedy's roller and Heffner singled, Hoag doubled, McQuinn tripled, but Laabs couldn't keep up the steady improvement and flied out to Welaj. The frame netted the Browns two runs and made the score 4-3.

The Browns chased over three additional markers in the sixth with a walk, Aderholt's error, a sacrifice and two hits accounting for the scoring. Welaj, our rightfielder, saved the inning from being even more disasterous by snatching Hoag's drive near the scoreboard while on a dead run. If he had been a "Little Potato" he could have ridden his gal around the block three times on the handlebars of his bicycle.

Appleton Pounded

To clinch matters, the Browns hopped Pete Appleton's slants for two runs in the eighth. Brother Travis aided the cause with another boot. This, with two walks, a single and a double caused the damage.

Kennedy's control, none too good at any stage, went haywire in the seventh and the Nats made a score. Lewis' single and a pair of walks filled the bases, Lewis scoring on Travis' fly to deep center. Anderholt also walked but Vernon ended the frame by lining out to rightfield.

After Kennedy had limped off the field, the Nats tried to stage an uprising at the expense of Pitcher Mills in the ninth. This young man, however, proved alternately good and bad. He walked West. He fanned Wright. He walked Travis. He fanned Aderholt. He allowed Vernon to double West home. He forced Evans to pop to first.

That ended it.

Van Horn Gains Semifinals

to lose anyhow, cut loose in the third set with the blistering shots the crowd had been waiting for. It appeared to take Sabin by surprise, and he let up in spite of himself. From that instant he was hamstrung.

In the last two sets Van Horn, hitting out recklessly on every shot, piled up 34 earned points, 5 of then on service aces. Sabin time and again just stood and shook his head as the pellets whizzed by.

Prior to this match, Joe Hunt, of Annapolis, and Donald McNeill, of Oklahoma City, completed their duel that had been halted by darkness last night. Hunt finally won it by the marathon count of 6—4, 15—13, 8—10, 4—6, 6—2, and will face Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, in the men's other semifinal tomorrow.

Helen Jacobs, the four-time former champion, attained the women's semifinals by defeating Valerie Scott, of England, 2—6, 6—2, 6—3, and will face Kay Stammers, of England, tomorrow. Like Miss Jacobs, the English girl staged a rally to defeat Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Boston, 1—6, 6—3, 6—3.

Gonzaga Beats G. W. High in Practice Tilt

D. C. Boys Turn Loose Powerful Attack in 4th Period to Win, 15-6

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Sept. 15.—Gonzaga High School, of Washington, required three-quarters to get warmed up and then turned loose a powerful attack in the final period to defeat George Washington High, 15-6, in a full-length practice contest here this afternoon. After going scoreless for the first three periods, the Purple tallied two touchdowns, a safety and an extra point in the last 12 minutes of play.

George Washington drew first blood in the third period when Sculley's fumble of a high punt gave the Presidents the ball on the 25-yard line. Four line plunges brought a first down on the 12, and after three line plays failed to gain, a pass from Ed Williams to Jim Taylor connected for the touchdown. Taylor's placement for the extra point was low.

Sculley atoned for his earlier error late in the same period when he made a brilliant 40-yard return of Williams' punt to place the ball on G. W.'s 28-yard line. A 23-yard jaunt off tackle by Healy made it a first down on the 8-yard line as the quarter ended, and on the second play of the fourth quarter Fred Rice went over guard to score. Jack Walsh drop-kicked the extra point.

Mid-way of the final period Gonzaga scored a safety when Williams attempted to pass deep in his own territory and was rushed into the end zone, while another attempted pass kicked back on the Presidents near the end of the game when Ralph Semone intercepted the ball and raced 44 yards to score.

Detroit Wins In N.A.B.F. Tournament

Earns Place in Two-Out-of-Three Championship Series

Detroit's Altes Lager nine made it seven National Amateur Baseball Federation victories in a row yesterday on the Ellipse, where it trounced the last semifinalist in the twenty-eighth annual tourney, the Jefferson County (Pa.) Kramers, by a wide 8-2 margin.

The victory earned Detroit, the defending champion, a berth in the two-out-of-three championship series along with Birmingham's Jordan Parkers, who advanced to the select round with an extra-inning decision over the Heurich Brewers Thursday. Opening hostilities will be at Griffith Stadium today at 12:30 p. m., as the first half of a doubleheader listing the Nats and St. Louis Browns in the nightcap.

Though Detroit jumped into a 1-0 lead yesterday before the game was well under way, it was a five-run spree in the second inning that settled matters. Second sacker Worzniak supplied the batting punch there as in the rest of the game by slamming a home run between left and center field with two men on base. In all the husky slugger had a single, double and homer in four trips to the plate.

Jefferson's only retaliation came in the fourth and fifth innings. An error and two successive Detroit misplays gave it a tally in the fourth, and a hit batter and Buhite's double accounted for the other run. Clarence Fuller hurled six-hit ball for the winners, as compared to the 13-hit job of Jack Sitosky.

Today's opposing pitchers will probably be Elwood Lee, for Detroit, and Chandler Harris, for the Parkers. Each has a two-hit game to his credit in the tourney. Detroit will be strongly favored, however, having rallied to give Birmingham its only defeat Wednesday, 6-4.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

The Civil Service Commission is being mildly bombarded by citizens who believe the international crisis is opening up Federal jobs. The commission, which has more than 100,000 eligibles on its registers who have passed open competitive examinations and are available for appointment, is informing the inquirers that they, too, must qualify through open competitive examinations, held as the needs of the service arise. From the Middle West a woman wrote that she is nearly 6 feet tall and would be glad to operate a truck. The possibilities of a national defense program seemed the hope of most of the job seekers.

Incidentally, there was some informal speculation at the convention of the American Federation of Government Employes over how Federal personnel, generally, would fare should the Government undertake a more vastly expensive defense program for the Nation. There was much formal talk of the growing number of Government employes—Federal, State and in the political subdivisions—this particularly from Senator O'Mahoney, who contended that there was a fear among the public over the Government's expansion. But Civil Service Commissioner Harry B. Mitchell insisted—in perhaps the most acclaimed speech of the convention—that large personnel is needed as long as the public requires increasing services from the Government.

The examining division of the Civil Service Commission has recently greatly enlarged and improved its staff to meet the growing specialization of activities in the Government's classified service. Currently, the professional and technical section of the division numbers about 60 college-trained specialists, embracing all fields of professional activity. Engineers, architects, educational specialists, chemists, attorneys, social science experts, doctors of medicine, accountants, specialists in examinations for the mechanical trades, agricultural experts and other specialists comprise the group. That's very well—but what still is needed is Congressional consideration of the work the commission is doing, a consideration taking the form of sufficient appropriations to give the country a trained and efficient personnel. Congress ripped the teeth from the civil service advancements contemplated in executive orders of the last 18 months through failure to give support and aid. Many thought the merit system's greatest opportunity was at hand with the opening of the last Congress. Much legislation to that end was prepared and many programs advanced. But where Congress was concerned, the results were more than disappointing. Now, while there is some hope that the Ramspeck bill to extend civil service to about 300,000 additional employes may have some chance in some ensuing Congress, it is generally admitted that the several distractions caused by the European war will shunt merit widely to the side—which would be nothing new in this land of patronage.

Among the A. F. G. E. convention's most capable workers: H. P. Strople, who directed the transportation committee, making available the special cars carrying Washington delegates to Atlantic City. The delegates said they had more fun on the train going and returning than at Atlantic City.

College students, traditionally hopeful, are turning in growing numbers to the Government for their careers—and more thoughtful officials of the Government would like to say that the Government offers careers. Occasionally, it does, of course. But anyhow—the Civil Service Commission has established a register for junior professional assistant in which more than 34,000 college gradutaes recently competed. The announcement specified that appointees will perform scientific and professional work in 1 of 22 optional branches, including economics, engineering, entomology, forestry, pharmacy, plant pathology, home economics and others. Several hundred appointments from the register—which has attracted much attention among the departments—are expected to be made soon. The caliber of the eligibles is demonstrated by the fact that of the more than 34,000 college graduates who competed, only about 7,500 obtained an eligible rating. Appointments will be made at salaries ranging from $1,620 to $2,000 a year, the usual entrance salary being $2,000.

Rainbow division veterans in the Federal service are invited to attend the monthly meeting for the new season of the District of Columbia Chapter, Rainbow Division Veterans, to be held tonight at 1700 L street northwest. The newly elected president, James E. Witherite, will preside. National President Elmer F. Neagle will discuss plans for the twenty-second national reunion of the organization to be held next July at Montgomery, Ala.

Station PDS Presents Vocalist as Guest

Betty Rohlader, 1003 Girard street northeast, will be the guest on station WMAL this morning. Mrs. Rohlader, a graduate of McKinley High School, has studied voice in this city for three years, and entertained with the Estelle Wentworth Light Opera Group.

"Station PDS Presents," broadcast by Lee Everett, from the Peoples Drug Store Studios, Eleventh and G streets northwest, is presented each weekday morning from 7:30 to 8:30 over Station WMAL by Peoples Drug Stores in co-operation with The Washington Post. Anyone over 16 years old may participate in the auditions at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. Studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance on this program.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Maj. W. W. Meldon, practicing surgeon of Belpool, England, writes to Editor Alphonse Moyse, of Bridge World, for advice as to what to do about his talented and lovely wife, who, though lacking in "card sense," insists upon playing contract.

It seems that during an important match the major was needed by one of his patients and that unbeknownst to him his wife took over his seat. The play was at a crucial point. If the major's teammates did not win this hand the last, they would lose the match. Alas for the major, his wife won the deal.

Here is the way he tells of the fatal deal, shown in today's box:

"I saw Mrs. Cross," who had been a member of our other pair, and asked her to explain. She told me she had played West's hand in the other room at three no trump. Hearts were led. She held up her ace till the third round, so lost only two hearts and two spade tricks.

"When they came into our room to see this hand played and heard Col. and Mrs. Forbes call three no trump she felt sure that the match was over and we were beaten.

"But she reckoned without Olga.

"West, Mrs. Forbes, played the hand and Maj. Jenkins led the three of hearts. Olga was allowed to win with the queen and she returned the four. West played the jack, North the king and declarer's heart ace was then forced out.

"Declarer then took four club tricks, but, to everybody's surprise, on the third and fourth rounds Olga threw her ace of spades and then the king! They thought that Maj. Jenkins was going to have apoplexy, but to his eternal credit he never said a word. His reward came very quickly, however, because now he had to get in with his jack on the first or second round of spades to make his two hearts and defeat the contract.

"When asked her reasons for discarding the ace and king of spades, Olga would give only her usual reply that I had told her to.

"And now I want to know what to do, as Olga has been picked to represent the club in the next tournament."

ADRIANA

By George Dyer

A Story of Love and Intrigue in Vineyard Sound

Chapter 35

"IS THERE anyone on board beside the men in this cabin?"

"The little sailor from the Patria is down in the engine room." Adriana pointed to a railed open hatch in the middle of the floor. The odds would be heavy enough if things came to a fight, especially with my best hand as good as useless. While I was considering how I might use guile instead of brawn, I noticed the "count" pick up a transmitter and say something into it. Mr. Raskin turned his head in the headphones and nodded. Then he got up and stepped over to the helmsman. The deafening roar of the motors died to comparative quiet.

DYER

A dismal howl drifted in from the night ahead, the first outside sound we had heard since we started from Browns Ledge. Mr. Raskin said, in a voice almost normally pitched:

"That's what you picked up in the obstacle detector. Brenton Reef lightship, and dead ahead. How's that for hitting it on the nose, Count?"

"Neat," admitted the "count."

"We'll have you ashore in 20 minutes. We'll take it easy in the entrance. My helmsman and I know this channel as we know our mothers' faces, but don't unfasten your safety belts yet, ladies and gentlemen. Even at this unholy hour of the morning we might meet something coming out. I have a superstition that the last leg of a trip is always the most dangerous time."

I looked at my watch. Under the shattered crystal the hands stood at 2:48, the moment when I must have struck the deck of the Mark X. It was perhaps an hour later, or more likely less.

While I was concerned with this, Mr. Raskin had strolled across the cabin and said in the most casual tone: "Safety belt tight, Count?" He tested the catch on the "count's" belt, then walked back to try mine.

"It's O. K.," I said, unwilling to have him breathing on me any more (Adriana was right, the man did smell too much), but I couldn't stop him. H had to click the flap-and-ring a couple of times, with a sickening air of solicitude for my security, and then do the same for Adriana's belt before he appeared to be satisfied.

He went back and stood by the man at the wheel while we rounded the lightship.

I resumed my consideration of the problem of how to outguess Mr. Raskin, in complete ignorance of the fact that, by one simple move, he had already won the battle of wits, hands down.

The Mark X ran up the entrance to the Eastern Passage at a speed which would have been breathtaking in another craft, but which was little more than idling for her. The fog over Newport appeared not to be so dense as over the open sea; buoy and other lights could be seen at some distance ahead. Mr. Raskin had snapped on his running lamps, and the expermental torpedo boat slid through the night behind a false front of respectability.

SUFFICIENT sound-proofing had gone into the canstruction of the cabin to make conversation in ordinary tones possible at such a speed. After he had satisfied himself that the helmsman was following the channel properly, the president of the Sea Reduction Corporation (showing a fine scorn for the safety measures he had prescribed for us) came over and leaned his fat back against the railing around the engine-room and began to talk with the "count".

The latter took off his headphones and swung his chair to face Mr. Raskin. Both men were so near my seat that (but for caution and the belt around my waist) I could have reached out and kicked their shins. In the case of the president of our company, this would have been fun.

The tall blond young man with the hard and handsome features leaned back in his chair and surveyed Mr. Raskin carefully. His expression was hard to analyze, even in the reasonably good light which reached it from the lamp over the obstacle detector. There was calculation on it, and a chilly private amusement, and some fraction of contempt. The promoter, on the other hand, was all nervous eagerness, which he tried to cover with an air of business-like impassiveness. He would have been a poor hand at poker; at this moment any one could see that he had huge stakes on the table.

The conversation between the two men which followed was the most alarming and strange and tense I ever overheard. It began in French, but this shortly proved too much of a handicap for Mr. Raskin. The "count," on the other hand, was completely at home in it, and used it not only to express his ideas but also to run the promoter neatly through and through with sharp and subtle jesting.

They started with a technical discussion of the qualities of the Mark X, parts of which I was able to follow. The foreigner seemed to approve of the boat's performance, in a somewhat condescending tone. Then, when he had evidently raised Mr. Raskin's hopes to a point that suited him, he said the Mark X was a magnificent engine of destruction, but only novel in details. As for the promoter's "other scheme," ah, it was too vast, too dangerous. He must, so regretfully, advise his superiors to have none of it. M'sieu' Raskin was without doubt a man of great vision and genius—but, no, his larger idea would not work.

"WHY DO you say that?" protested the American, slipping unconsciously out of a language in which he was so little at ease, "I've proved to you tonight it's fully possible."

The "count" followed him into English with a shrug. He was perfectly willing to give an adversary the choice of weapons. If Mr. Raskin was reluctant to be skewered on a rapier, the other would equally readily cut him open with a broadsword.

"You have proved to me that you have for sale one first-class coastal torpedo boat," he said. "My superiors might possibly be interested in making you a small offer for certain minor details of design. Some of these it may be feasible for us to steal, which would be cheaper. We have already in our navy, of course, craft of much the same general type as this one of yours."

"Not one its equal," said the promoter.

"No? Perhaps not now. But come and visit us next year. I have learned a great deal on my travels this season." The "count" smiled blandly at the man before him. "But let us continue our analysis of what you say you have proved to me tonight. A second thing you have shown me is that a charming young lady," he bowed toward Adriana against his seat belt, "can make shift rather successfully to navigate one of these craft along your country's coastline without the normal peacetime aids. But while I grant you that your officers might not have the assistance of those aids in war, on the other hand you must grant that the young lady's talent is exceptional, and that our officers would scarcely have the time to learn what she knows. Moreover, how do you expect to find us instructors for this esoteric art?"

"Oh, let that pass," said the promoter, "I just had an unexpected chance to show you what could be done in that way, so I did."

"It was unexpected, wasn't it," the "count" said. "And delightful—and hardly had anything to do with the general proposition."

I could see the pressure building up in Mr. Raskin as it had on the day I cross-examined him about the affairs of the Sea Reduction Corporation. He was being squeezed, and he didn't like it. The foreigner was mocking him, and Adriana and I, just by being present, seemed to be hampering his salesmanship. He looked at me a couple of time uneasily, then finally come to some decision about the situation which evidently freed him to say anything he chose in front of the girl and myself. I didn't particularly like to think what the decision implied.

"All I wanted to show you," he said to the "count," on this new note of certainty, "is that a boat like the Mark X could leave the plant at Menemsha Bight after dark, and by dawn, without help from the shore, it could be off any part of the northeastern coast you wished. It could be in New York harbor, or Boston harbor. By the first light it could be at any United States Navy yard from Brooklyn to Portsmouth, N. H."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

DIXIE DUGAN — The Truth Pays — J. P. McEVOY AND H. J. STRIEBEL

YOU'RE THE FIRST STRANGER TO ENTER THIS GATE, YOUNG LADY!
I'M HIGHLY FLATTERED, SIR
YOU KNOW WHY I LET YOU IN, DON'T YOU?? BECAUSE I LIKE YOUR FRANKNESS —YOUR TRUTHFULNESS!
OH— YOU'RE JUST BEING SWEET!
THE MASTER HAS BEEN ANNOYED THESE MANY MONTHS BY PEOPLE TRYING TO SNEAK IN — ONE MAN ACTUALLY CLIMBED OVER THE WALL AND ——
YES, I KNOW! I SAW HIM SHORTLY AFTER A DOCTOR TREATED HIM
THE MASTER'S ORDERS ARE 'NOBODY ENTERS' AND 'NOBODY LEAVES'
HEH-HEH-HEH
HUH? —OH— BUT— BUT I CAN ONLY STAY A FEW MINUTES

DONALD DUCK — A Pair of Kibitzers — BY WALT DISNEY

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Intrusion — BY FRANK MARTINEK

NED BRANT—A Story of College Athletics — BY BOB ZUPPKE

HOPE OUR INEXPERIENCED BACKS REMEMBER YOUR WARNING ABOUT TRYING TO INTERCEPT PASSES WITH THEIR BACKS TO THE GOAL LINE
THERE GOES A PASS ACROSS THE GOAL LINE!
OUR LEFT HALF SHOULD BE ABLE TO KNOCK IT DOWN!
JAKE THE TRAINER
KNOCK IT DOWN— KNOCK IT DOWN!
DROP HIM BEHIND THE GOAL LINE!
CHIN UP, PAL— WE'RE NOT LICKED YET!
IT'S A SAFETY AND TWO POINTS FOR BUXTON!

APPLE MARY AND DENNIE — BY MARTHA ORR

THAT POOR CHILD, TESSIE! CARRIED AWAY BY GYPSIES! IF WE CAN ONLY OVERTAKE THEM BEFORE DARK!
CAN'T UNDERSTAND WHY SHE'D LEAVE HOME—EVEN HER HOME—WITH A STRANGER!
GET ALONG THERE, DOLLY!
GOSH MARY, LOOK AHEAD THERE—A MAN AND A LITTLE GIRL!.. AN' US WITHOUT NO WEAPONS!
WE'VE GOT RIGHT ON OUR SIDE, AND THAT'S WEAPON ENOUGH...
